Choose your date and location, then participate in this year's program to:

- Hone your leadership skills for working in a rapidly changing environment
- Share experiences with others about how campuses are adapting and adjusting to new realities
- Create new personal networks and networking skills to better tap the higher education community

Presentations, structured wellness time, and small-group discussions will emphasize problem solving strategies for college and university leaders.

"Thank you for the opportunity to be a part of this amazing conference. I think that if any woman within a campus community position has the opportunity to go to this conference, they will greatly benefit in many ways."

-Miranda Linville, Oregon State University

When asked about recommending the program to someone else, past participants said:

"Yes. It is an opportunity to network and learn. I was surprised to see that another person from my campus had registered—it was an opportunity to make a new friend."

-Rachel Schipper, University of Florida

"Yes. I feel like women are so often competing with each other for the higher level positions, we lose sight of the need to be supportive and this conference reminds us that we need each other."

-Patricia Hartell, New Mexico State University
