Outcomes from the Culture of Respect Collective Program
Cohorts 1 and 2

The Culture of Respect Collective, a NASPA signature initiative, is a two-year program designed to address the issue of campus sexual violence. Supported by a comprehensive, evidence-informed framework, the program guides institutions of higher education through a rigorous process of self-assessment and targeted organizational change.

Cumulatively, participating institutions' self-assessment scores increased from baseline to endpoint in six key areas identified as priorities by Culture of Respect. These scores reflect substantive changes in programs, policies, and procedures that strengthen institutions' strategies for preventing and responding to sexual violence.

As a result of institutions' participation in the Culture of Respect Collective program...

- 92% increased the doses of required prevention programming provided to undergraduate students
- 87% agreed that the components of the program were effective in helping their institution identify areas for growth and improvement
- 85% of goals set at baseline were completed or in progress at the conclusion of the program
- 77% reported participation in the Collective increased collaboration between departments and colleagues
