JCC Connexions

Quarterly Newsletter About the Journal of College and Character

Vol. 2, No. 2, May 2016

Jackson Shares “Reflections on a Life and Career in Student Affairs”

In the May 2016 issue of the JCC, Michael L. Jackson, vice president emeritus and professor of higher education at the University of Southern California, and former NASPA president, shares with readers his “Reflections on a Life and Career in Student Affairs: Guideposts and Structure.”

Michael, who is a featured focus author for the current issue of Connexions, also serves as executive director of USC’s International Advancement, where he explores new fundraising models while developing international collaborations that support entrepreneurial approaches to education.

Michael’s expertise in fundraising for worthy projects has been vital to USC’s mission to serve all students. For example he led fundraising efforts to generate $10.5M in April 2010 to establish the Kortschak Center for Learning and Creativity to provide support for students with dyslexia, ADHD, and other learning differences. He also served as chief financial officer and member of the board of directors of USC’s Good Neighbors Program, a 501c3 organization designed to support programs that put children on the pathway to college, make streets safer for families, and offer activities and programs aimed at improving the health and well being of residents in the neighborhoods surrounding USC’s campuses.

Under his leadership, the student affairs division established the Office of Student Support and Advocacy and the Trojans Care for Trojans program to support students in crisis; the Lesbian Gay Bisexual Transgender Resource Center; Transfer and Veteran Student Programs;
John Kolligian strongly believes that college health programs occupy a unique niche and offer a special opportunity to improve students’ lives in and beyond the classroom. As the first psychologist to lead Princeton University’s student health service, he has focused on building a service that champions the interdependence of medical and mental health problems. He also knows that a dynamic university health program, like any complex system at the heart of student life, requires compassionate underpinnings and relies on evidence-informed strategies to improve care for all students, including strategic outreach to those students who might be disinclined to seek care.

For example, Princeton’s health service has launched a comprehensive campus health initiative called UMatter aimed at empowering students, faculty, and staff to promote a healthier and safer university community. UMatter unites health, well-being and safety efforts across campus, allowing individuals in the university community to easily find resources and learn skills to better care for themselves and others.

The initiative focuses on preventing and addressing health and safety issues common to college campuses: high-risk drinking (“limits matter”); interpersonal violence (“respect matters”); and mental health distress (“connecting matters”). It is one of several initiatives that have emerged from John’s health service’s continual cycles of organization-wide self-study and strategic planning. Such efforts proactively seek to devise and assess ways to realize fully both student and organizational capacities.

John received a Ph.D. in clinical psychology from Yale University, a M.B.A. from Columbia University, a M.A. in education and child study from Tufts University, and a B.A. in psychology from Stanford University. He serves on the JCC Editorial Review Board.
“Selfies of Life” Provide Authors With Research on Student Values

Hsin-Yu Chen’s first-hand experience with cultural differences continues to enrich and broaden her interest in leisure studies. Her current research focus is on ways cultural values relate to the daily lives of individuals, particularly in regard to leisure participation and health implications. In addition, she is interested in issues surrounding social organization within cultures, the influence that cultural norms have upon leisure intraculturally and cross-culturally, and ways that leisure impacts culture.

Originally from Taiwan, she came to the US to earn a master of science degree in recreation and leisure services administration at Florida State University. While in Tallahassee, she was involved in event planning and marketing at the Tallahassee Museum and the City of Tallahassee’s Parks and Recreation Department. As a doctoral candidate in recreation, park, and tourism management at Penn State, she has participated in a variety of research projects that examine college students’ rationales behind daily decisions in relation to free time use, lifestyles, out-of-class experiences, and personal development. Research in this vein has helped her to maintain a solid connection between research and practice.

A current JCC Connexions Focus Author, Hsin-Yu’s article (with co-authors Careen Yarnal, John T.P. Hustad, and Damon Sims) is “Take a Selfie of Life: A Qualitative Exploration of College Students’ Self-Reflections on Free Time Use and Personal Values,” which explores college students’ self-reflections on free time use and personal values. The findings suggest that leisure education may empower students with fundamental knowledge about positive and negative aspects of free time and the importance of choices, decisions, and priorities. The knowledge learned in class, coupled with a three-phase time diary project, prompted self-reflection on life choices and time management. For some students, this reflection inspired them to engage in more meaningful activities, such as volunteering and civic engagement.

Careen Yarnal is Hsin-Yu’s advisor as well as a co-author of “Take a Selfie of Life.” Careen has made a personal commitment to connect her teaching and research by exploring the relationship between college students’ use of leisure time in general, excess alcohol consumption in particular, and how using academic approaches, such as a leisure education intervention, might be of some help in addressing excess alcohol consumption among college students. Through this work, her understanding of the importance of connecting in-class learning with out-of-class experience has grown.

She co-chairs the Council on Engaged Scholarship (CoES) at Penn State, which is a university-wide effort to provide every undergraduate student with at least one engaged scholarship experience (i.e., out-of-class experience that complements in-class learning). Vice presidents from Undergraduate Education, Student Affairs, and Outreach sponsor the CoES, which has university-wide student, faculty, staff, and administrator representation. As associate professor of recreation, park, and tourism management at Penn State, her research interests include positive emotions and stress and leisure coping, play, healthy aging, and the role of leisure across the lifespan.

To engage in conversation with others about their JCC article, please go to their blog post.
Meet our JCC Ambassadors, who are developing an online learning community dedicated to scholarship and practices that relate to the moral and civic development and behaviors of college students. Clare Cady, associate editor for social media, leads this group of dynamic leaders who research—and lead conversations relating to—articles and blog posts authored by JCC scholars.

Sarah Nichter's passion is leading programs and practices that can make higher education better at what it does. Her current focus as a teacher of composition, literature, and student success skills is to help students succeed in their coursework as well as realize their goals beyond the classroom. Over the years, she has been involved in many programs whose goal is to support college students in their efforts to realize their best potential. An associate professor at Sullivan University, she is currently working on her PhD in leadership in higher education at Bellarmine University.

Sable Manson

In 2014, the University of Southern California’s Center for Religion and Civic Culture and the Interreligious Council of Southern California identified Sable Manson as one of the Future50 Faith leaders in Los Angeles. It is easy to see why Sable is deserving of the title “faith leader”! As program director of USC’s Souljourners, she works with USC students who are involved in interfaith experience through co-curricular projects, initiatives, and activities, as well as weekly written reflection. She currently serves as the co-chair for research for NASPA’s Spirituality and Religion in Higher Education Knowledge Community and also contributes to Patheos’s blog series Spirituality Itself.

Aaron Morrison

To his role as JCC Ambassador, Aaron Morrison brings his enthusiasm about being a scholar/practitioner of higher education, specializing in leadership development, spiritual formation among college students, history of higher education, and church/university relationships. He currently serves as residential education coordinator for the Department of Residential Education at Nebraska Wesleyan University in Lincoln, NE. Aaron earned his M.A. in higher education administration from Taylor University and a B.S. from Indiana Wesleyan University.

Kevin Wright

Kevin Wright’s aspiration to be a college president is grounded in his devoted advocacy for more affordability and accessibility for students wanting to pursue a higher education degree. Kevin, a first-generation graduate student from Las Vegas, is pursuing his master’s degree in student affairs administration at Lewis & Clark. He studied communication studies with a minor in sociology at Northern Arizona University. His hobbies include traveling and networking—while finding time to attend concerts and view movies.
Catherine WoodBrooks Develops Assessment of SOPHIA

Catherine WoodBrooks directs her interests and energy to contribute to the success of a range of programs at Assumption College. One such program is SOPHIA (Sophomore Initiative at Assumption), which began in fall 2013 and is funded in part through a grant by the Lilly Endowment. SOPHIA's mission is to foster the culture of vocational exploration at the college while enhancing the educational mission of the Augustinians of the Assumption, which sponsors this Catholic institution.

Designed with a balance of curricular and co-curricular components, SOPHIA draws upon the heart of an Assumptionist education, which is the rich and productive community between teacher and student. The program’s mission is to foster the culture of vocational exploration at the college while guiding students to recognize that one’s vocation lasts a lifetime.

As vice president for student affairs, Catherine is developing a formal assessment that will evaluate students’ understanding of vocation and their personal discernment progress to determine what particular components of the SOPHIA program may have enhanced that understanding. The SOPHIA program consists of a rich array of opportunities for assessment, such as retreats, reflection papers, and class discussions.

The assessment includes a rubric to evaluate students’ responses to a set of prompts during different stages of the year-long program, which measures progress in students’ vocational discernment. Especially useful for the assessment project are the fall and spring retreats because they represent metaphorical bookends of the SOPHIA experience.

While serving on the JCC Editorial Board, Catherine brings to the journal her focus on moral, ethical, and spiritual development as well as her rich leadership experience. A former president of the Maine College Personnel Association, she is a recipient of the NASPA Region I Regional Award for Institutional Leadership. She earned her bachelor’s and master’s degrees from the University of Maine and a Ph.D. from The Ohio State University.

Jon C. Dalton Institute on College Student Values

In February 2016, higher education administrators, faculty, and graduate students came together to discuss student activism and advocacy at the 26th annual Jon C. Dalton Institute on College Student Values. Keynote addresses from George Kuh, Jamie Washington, Penny Rue, and Atira Charles highlighted a schedule that included a panel discussion hosted by the Character Clearinghouse, a film screening and follow-up dialogue on John Singleton’s Higher Learning, as well as concurrent sessions presenting research and practices relating to the conference theme.

Plans are underway for the 2017 Institute, which will take place February 2-4 in Tallahassee, FL. Information about next year’s theme and schedule will be made available this summer. To learn more about the Dalton Institute, write to values@admin.fsu.edu or visit their website at http://studentvalues.fsu.edu.
There is an important dimension of leadership that is difficult to define or measure and so is often neglected. This facet of leadership can be called “practical wisdom” or “life learning.” Practical wisdom is the expertise gained through accumulated life experiences and the knowledge and insights derived from personal reflection on these experiences. Practical wisdom is important in leadership roles because it combines both dimensions of sound knowledge and good judgment.

This special collection of the Journal of College and Character focuses on the practical wisdom of eleven senior student affairs and higher education leaders. In these articles the authors reflect on their leadership journeys and share their practical wisdom gleaned from the values, experiences, and insights of a lifetime of work in higher education offer reflections and stories on the values, experiences, and insights that guided them and gave them the most meaning and fulfillment.

- “Reflections on a Life and a Career in Student Affairs,” Michael Jackson
- “Trustworthy Leadership,” Diana C. Walsh
- “Spirituality and Leadership,” Susan Komives
- “From Here to Clare: Yearnings of a Scholar-Turned-Dad,” Carney Strange
- “Authenticity and Spirituality in Higher Education: My Orientation,” Arthur W. Chickering
- “Pilgrimage to My Roots: Exploring Student Affairs and Spirituality in Ireland,” Margaret Jablonski
- “Some Personal Reflections After 42 Years in Student Affairs,” Arthur Sandeen
- “You Can’t Rock the Boat if You’re Rowing It: And Other Observations About Life as a Student Affairs Administrator,” Gregory S. Blimling
- “A Daufuskie Island Lad in an Academic Community: An Extraordinary Journey of Personal Transformation,” J. Herman Blake & Ervin R. Simmons

Character Clearinghouse Update: Read What’s New in CC

Spring 2016 Resource Highlights

- Study Abroad as a Character Development Opportunity
- Michelle Sterk Barrett, Dalton 2016 Dissertation of the Year
- Luckyday Scholars Program, Dalton 2016 Good Practice Award
- Program Highlight: Multicultural Leadership Summit
- Rev. Dr. Jamie Washington Interview

The #DaltonSpotlight’s Recent Posts

- Tulane University’s Lavin-Bernick Center
- Noles Professional Institute

Find out how you can submit your program to be included in the #DaltonSpotlight
As individuals prepare their exciting workshops, interactive symposia, and research papers for the 2017 NASPA: Student Affairs Administrators in Higher Education Annual Conference, the Spirituality and Religion in Higher Education Knowledge Community (SRHE KC) would like to encourage everyone to consider KC sponsorship when submitting a proposal application. Each year, SRHE KC sponsors three sessions that engage issues related to religion, secularism, spirituality, and meaning-making in higher education. For example, at the NASPA conference last March in Indianapolis our sponsored sessions included “Addressing Challenges Related to Religious Dialogue on Campus,” “Navigating Conflicts Related to Religious Identity & Diversity on Campus,” and “What Chaplains and Student Affairs Professionals Can Learn from Each Other.” SRHE KC strives to select a diversity of programs for sponsorship so they encourage persons to consider previously sponsored sessions when completing their applications.

To learn more about the SRHE KC, visit their blog, Twitter, and Facebook pages.

The recent blog post “Exploring Old Definitions With New Lenses” by Cody Nielsen, NASPA’s expert in residence for religious, secular, and spiritual initiatives, discusses the importance of words and their definitions, particularly, the meaning of such terms as religious, secular, spiritual, atheist, humanist, and non-theist as they relate to young people and their experiences in the higher education setting.

For a fascinating discussion on this topic and the role of humanism and its increasing attraction to college students, listen to the dialogue between Cody and Chris Stedman, humanist chaplain at Yale, and one of the leading voices in the humanist community in the United States. They discuss what it means to be humanist in the US and on our campuses. See other contributions by Cody: “Islam in America and on our Campuses: Reducing Stigma, Increasing Support” and “Should It Be in the Classroom? Religious, Secular, and Spiritual Values.”

---

Journal of College and Character

Volume 17, Number 2, May 2016

“Reflections on a Life and Career in Student Affairs: Guideposts and Structure”
Michael L. Jackson

“The Assessment of Service Through the Lens of Social Change Leadership: A Phenomenological Approach”
Eric Lee Buschlen and Jonathan Reusch

“Take a Selfie of Life: A Qualitative Exploration of College Students’ Self-Reflections on Free Time Use & Personal Values”
Hsin-Yu Chen, Careen Yarnal, John T. P. Hustad and Damon Sims

“An Examination of University Student-Athletes’ Motivations to Contribute”
Colin Jeffery Deal and Martin Camiré

“The Boys Club: Borrowing a Feminist Lens to Critique Men-Only Groups in the Fight Against Gender Oppression”
Nickolas Ashford Jordan and Jordan Luzader

“Assessing the Spiritual Leadership of Students: An Equanimity Study”
David Rozeboom, Russell Frohardt, Claudia Carroll, Tom Sullivan, Nick Phelps, Nicole Trevino, David Blair, Christy Brown and James Puglisi

College (Un)Bound: The Future of Higher Education and What It Means for Students
Reviewed by David Eberhardt
Index of Blog Posts

JCC Connexions

H Chen & C Yarnal & others: “SHOULD STUDENTS’ USE OF LEISURE TIME MATTER TO COLLEGE EDUCATORS? CRITICAL CONVERSATION #4”

J. Dalton: “DO COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES PERPETUATE INCOME INEQUALITY BY FAVORING THE WEALTHIEST STUDENTS?”

K. Guthrie: “UNDERGRADUATE CERTIFICATE IN LEADERSHIP STUDIES: AN OPPORTUNITY FOR SEAMLESS LEARNING”

M. Jackson: “WHAT ARE THE CHALLENGES & REWARDS OF BEING STUDENT AFFAIRS PROFESSIONALS? CRITICAL CONVERSATION #5”

F. Lane & J. Schutts: “PREDICTING THE PRESENCE OF PURPOSE THROUGH THE SELF-EFFICACY BELIEFS OF ONE’S TALENTS”

P. Mather with replies from C. Broadhurst, S. Martin, & L. Harrison: “STUDENT ACTIVISM AND ADVOCACY”

P. Mather, C. Bridges, & M. Johnson: “JOHNSON, BRIDGES, & MATHER TALK ABOUT THEIR RESEARCH ON SOCIAL CHANGE AND SOCIAL JUSTICE”

D. Morgan with co-authors, H. Zimmerman, T. Terrell, and B. Marcotte: “SHOULD FRATERNITIES BE BANNED FROM COLLEGE CAMPUSES?” CRITICAL CONVERSATION TOPIC #1”

G. Paine: “CARING ABOUT STUDENTS – THE WORK OF STUDENT AFFAIRS”

M. Swanbrow Becker & D. Drum: “WHEN AND HOW SHOULD WE INTERVENE IN STUDENTS’ LIVES? CRITICAL CONVERSATION #3”

S. Watt with replies from L. Roper and C. King: “RACIAL CONFLICTS AS LEARNING OPPORTUNITIES” CRITICAL CONVERSATION #2”

Journal of College & Character Editors

Jon C. Dalton, Co-Editor, The Florida State University

Pamela C. Crosby, Co-Editor, NASPA – Student Affairs Administrators in Higher Education

Peter Mather, Senior Associate Editor, Ohio University

Nicholas A. Bowman, Associate Editor, Bowling Green State University

Pu-Shih Daniel Chen, Associate Editor, University of North Texas

Mathew Johnson, Associate Editor, Central Michigan University

Jenny Small, Associate Editor, Independent Scholar

Clare Cady, Associate Editor for Social Media, College and University Food Bank Alliance, Single Stop

Contributing Editors

Michael Cuyjet, Opinions and Perspectives, University of Louisville

David M. Eberhardt, What They’re Reading, Birmingham-Southern College

Cassie Meyer, Interfaith Cooperation, The Interfaith Youth Core

Ebbo Patel, Interfaith Cooperation, The Interfaith Youth Core

Tiffani Riggers-Piehl, Spirituality on Campus, Baylor University

Larry D. Roper, Ethical Issues on Campus, Oregon State University

Darbi L. Roberts, International Perspectives, Columbia University

Dennis C. Roberts, International Perspectives, Independent Consultant

Sue Saunders, Best Practices, University of Connecticut

Scott Seider, Civic Engagement on Campus, Boston University