Greetings colleagues,

We are pleased to welcome you to Orlando for the inaugural NASPA Conferences on Student Success in Higher Education. This event co-locates four distinct conferences (Assessment, Persistence, and Data Analytics; Closing the Achievement Gap; First-generation Student Success; and Student Financial Wellness) with intersectional outcomes as a unique opportunity for participants to learn, network, and engage. The conference planning committees, NASPA staff, and volunteers have worked tirelessly to craft an experience that will inspire and energize attendees. With over 1,400 participants, this event represents the association’s second largest in-person event.

As a registered attendee, you have access to programming for any of the four conferences. With a diverse offering of dynamic keynotes, thought-provoking workshops, and engaging networking opportunities, the 2019 NASPA Conferences on Student Success in Higher Education is your opportunity to take a cross-functional approach to student success. Our conference programming seeks to critically examine the systemic and institutional barriers impeding success for today’s college students.

Through this convergence of topics, professionals from across the academy will join NASPA in advancing the equity agenda on campus, especially for students of color, first-generation students, and low-income students, to improve measurements of persistence and completion, as well as career readiness.

Again, welcome, and we hope you have an incredible conference experience.

CONFERENCES ON STUDENT SUCCESS IN HIGHER EDUCATION

The Assessment, Persistence, and Data Analytics Conference (APDA) is designed to address critical issues related to campus programming, student success, and outcomes assessment. Sessions will provide a forum for professionals to advance their knowledge and skills of assessment and data analytics, and data’s role in student persistence.

The Closing the Achievement Gap Conference (CTAG) provides an avenue for thought leaders and practitioners to share ideas, strategies, and evidence-based research on ways to dismantle barriers related to student success. Sessions will explore the various factors woven into students’ experiences which may impact their success and completion.

The First-generation Student Success Conference (FGSS) will examine a breadth of topics critical to advancing the holistic outcomes of first-generation students. Sessions will consider the vast intersectionality of first-generation students, the systemic and institutional barriers to success, and evidence-based practices to student support and services.

The Student Financial Wellness Conference (SFWC) will address the complexities of college students’ financial security and wellness. Sessions will inform participants of effective strategies (i.e. emergency aid grants, food pantries, peer education) for helping students improve their fiscal health during college and remain financially stable after graduation.
NASPA is grateful to the planning committees for all four events. The time, dedication, and expertise shared by the committees is much appreciated.

VOLUNTEERS

NASPA owes a debt of gratitude to our incredible volunteers. The service of the Conference Planning Committees can be seen in every aspect of the #SSHE19 experience. NASPA events are opportunities to celebrate the many members of our community who give their time and talent to help shape these learning experiences:

Thank you to:

» the 365 coordinating presenters who submitted program proposals and the nearly 350 individuals who reviewed these submissions.

» the over 250 individuals presenting over 180 workshops, paper, and poster sessions.

There are a number of ways to get involved with NASPA and something for every interest, professional level, and level of time commitment. Stop by the NASPA table in the Exhibit Hall (Peninsula 4) to learn more about these opportunities, as well as benefits of being a member of the Association.

GENERAL INFORMATION

It’s all on the new MyNASPA App

The MyNASPA mobile app is where you’ll find everything you need to navigate the conference and craft your experience. You can download the app from either the Apple App or Google Play stores.

Build Your Schedule: The most up-to-date schedule information will always be found in the app. We will also send out notifications for any time or location changes via the app. You can search for educational sessions by session title, presenter name, professional level, competency, or topic area. You can also add your meetings, receptions, and other special events to your schedule right in the app. Be sure to book time in the Exhibit Hall so you don’t miss out on special onsite offers from our corporate sponsors—not to mention the best break-time snacks!

Connect with Colleagues: Our app allows you to easily share your contact information even when you’re on the go. First, be sure you have your full name and email (at a minimum) in your profile, and enable Bluetooth on your phone. When you’re looking to connect with someone, click the Shake to Connect icon at the same time as your new contact and give your phone a shake. The app will trade your contact information automatically!

Registration and Accessibility Desk
The attendee and exhibitor registration and accessibility desk is located in Atrium CD of the hotel and is marked on your map (pg. 124). Registration is open during the following hours:

Saturday, June 15 | 8:00 a.m. – 5:00 p.m. (Pre-cons and early-arrivals)
Sunday, June 16 | 7:30 a.m. – 5:00 p.m.
Monday, June 17 | 7:30 a.m. – 5:00 p.m.
Tuesday, June 18 | 7:30 a.m. – 11:30 a.m

Conference Location
All conference activities will be held at Renaissance Orlando at SeaWorld and are open to registered conference participants only.

Hotel Address: 6677 Sea Harbor Dr., Orlando, FL 32821

Attire
Attire for the conference is business casual.

Accessibility/Dietary Needs
If you have an accommodation request, dietary concerns, or questions, please speak with the NASPA staff at the registration and accessibility desk.

Cell Phones
As a courtesy to presenters, speakers, panelists, and attendees, please silence cell phones during program sessions. Please leave the session room if you must take or make a call.

Conference Badges and Lanyards
Name badges are to be worn in sessions and at any meals or ancillary events during the conference. Your badge not only indicates that you are fully registered for these programs, but also serves to build community among attendees.

To better identify other attendees registered for each conference, take a look at their badge lanyard:

Red: Assessment, Persistence, and Data Analytics
Dark Blue: Closing the Achievement Gap
Teal: First-generation Student Success
Green: Student Financial Wellness
Conference Materials
Workshop session materials will be posted to the NASPA Professional Development Archive (bit.ly/pdarchive) on the NASPA website. You will be able to access all materials using the login you created at the time of conference registration. When logging in, select the 2019 NASPA Conferences on Student Success in Higher Education event under “Current National Events.”

Please note: only materials that have been uploaded by presenters will be available.

Continuing Education
NASPA has been approved by NBCC as an Approved Continuing Education Provider, ACEP No. 5120. Programs that do not qualify for NBCC credit are clearly identified. NASPA is solely responsible for all aspects of the programs.

Participants can receive a maximum of 10.75 clock hours for this event. To receive credit, please complete a reporting form available at the registration table. In addition, you must complete an online evaluation of individual sessions, which will be emailed to you shortly after the conference. A certificate of completion will be sent via email after the form has been processed and approved.

A general certificate of attendance is available for sessions that are not eligible for NBCC. Forms to request NBCC credit and the general certificate are available at registration.

Evaluation
Event evaluations will be available online following the conclusion of the conferences and will be sent via email to all participants.

Exhibitors
We encourage you to stop by our Exhibit Hall in the Peninsula 4 Ballroom throughout the conference. A complete listing of conference exhibitors is located on page 116. Exhibitors will be available to engage in conversation at the following times. We also encourage you to stop by the Exhibit Hall during the specified break times and activities:

Hotel Map
A map of the meeting space can be found at the back of the program book and in the MyNASPA app.

Lost and Found
Lost and found will be housed at the conference registration desk. Any found items should be brought to the conference registration desk.

NASPA Mobile App
Enhance your conference experience with the MyNASPA Mobile App! View the schedule and create your own itinerary, browse exhibitors and sponsors, read up on speakers, floor plans, and more. To download, visit the Apple App Store or Google Play and search for “MyNASPA.” After installation, create a user profile or sign in and download the 2019 NASPA Conferences on Student Success in Higher Education event page. Enter the passphrase SSHE19 to access the event.

NASPA Publication Sales
NASPA has a variety of publications for sale during the conference at the Peninsula Desk. Publications will be for sale at the following times:

- Sunday, June 16 | 1:30 p.m. – 5:00 p.m.
- Monday, June 17 | 8:00 a.m. – 5:00 p.m.
  - 12:00 p.m. – 1:00 p.m. Book Signing (see page 14 for more information)
- Tuesday, June 18 | 8:00 a.m. – 12:00 p.m.

You may purchase publications onsite at the conference for a reduced rate and take them home with you! Reduced rates are available only onsite and do not apply to purchases made after the conference.

Social Media - #SSHE19
Join in the conversation via Twitter and Instagram! Participants should use #SSHE19 as the hashtag for the event. For all the latest tweets and photos, be sure to follow the official NASPA Twitter, @NASPAtweets.

WiFi
We are excited to offer complimentary internet access to conference participants. Please join the NASPA network using the password sshe2019.
Conference Services

All Gender Restrooms
Across from Peninsula Ballrooms | 1st Floor

An all gender restroom designation means the restrooms are intended as a welcome space for transgender, gender non-binary, and genderqueer people, as well as people of all gender identities and expressions. If you choose to use this restroom, you are aware that it is an inclusive space. If you are uncomfortable using an all gender restroom, please use any of the other restrooms within the hotel. Please remember that gender expression takes many different forms. We affirm the right of each person to choose and use the restroom best suited to their needs and to do so free from scrutiny and judgement.

Nursing Space
Saturday – Tuesday | All day | Zander, 2nd Floor

The Zander Room on the second floor will be available for registered conference attendees in need of a nursing area during the conference. The space will be available throughout the duration of the conference.

Open Recovery Space
Sunday – Monday | 7:00 p.m. – 10:00 p.m. | Bluegill, 2nd Floor

The Bluegill Room has been designated as an open, unfacilitated space available for conference attendees identifying on any spectrum of recovery.

Quiet Space/Sensory Room
Sunday – Tuesday | All Day | Mako, 2nd Floor

The Mako Room on the second floor is intended to provide a quiet, calm space where conference attendees can spend time away from noise, lights, and other stimuli of conference spaces. NASPA staff will periodically monitor this space, but we ask that any users of this space be courteous and respectful of one another. This space is not available for conversations, meetings, or phone calls, and is open to registered conference attendees.

Shuttle Service
Monday | 5:30 p.m. – 11:00 p.m.
Pickup location: North Entrance of the Renaissance Orlando at SeaWorld

NASPA is pleased to provide attendees with complimentary shuttle service to/from Universal Studios Orlando area (including Universal CityWalk, Universal Studios, and Universal Studios Islands of Adventure) on Monday evening. We encourage you to take advantage of this opportunity to join your colleagues and experience all that Universal CityWalk has to offer. It is free to enter CityWalk’s outdoor area full of restaurants, shops, movies, mini-golf, and live entertainment. Guests may also purchase a half-day ticket to enter either or both Universal Studios theme parks directly through the Universal Studios website (see the MyNASPA app for more information). Remember to bring your conference badge with you.

Guests will go through a required security screening and bag check prior to entering CityWalk. We encourage everyone to review the Universal Studios policies regarding permitted/prohibited items, and bag/cooler size restrictions, prior to boarding the shuttle. Shuttle service will begin at 6:00 p.m. with boarding starting at 5:30 p.m. at the North Entrance to the Renaissance Orlando at SeaWorld.

Concern Gathering: Free Speech and the Inclusive Campus

Sunday | 10:00 a.m. – 12:00 p.m.
Tuesday | 1:00 p.m. – 3:00 p.m.
Bluegill, 2nd Floor

Ever find yourself holding back from engaging in conversation regarding a controversial issue on your campus, or even amongst those closest to you? With research data indicating a nation evermore divided by political differences, it’s no wonder why. To assist higher education stakeholders in having conversations across difference, NASPA is partnering with the Kettering Foundation to develop campus-based resources for dialogue and deliberation within and outside of the curriculum. The first resource that we are seeking ideas in developing is related to the topic of Free Speech and the Inclusive Campus. To assist the association in developing such a resource, your voice is needed. Join us by participating in one of the Concern Gathering sessions being offered. All perspectives are welcomed and encouraged, and no experience is necessary to participate.

Unlikely Film Screening

Monday | 6:30 p.m. – 8:30 p.m.
Crystal Ballroom

In the US, less than 50% of students who start college ever finish, making America’s college completion rate among the worst in the world. Now there are more than 35 million Americans who started college, but never finished, leaving them saddled with debt, and behind their peers in earning power. Featuring interviews with LeBron James, Howard Schultz, and our nation’s leading voices in education, this penetrating and personal new film investigates America’s college dropout crisis through the lives of five diverse students as they fight for a second chance at opportunity, and highlights the innovators reimagining higher education for the 21st century.

Light refreshments will be provided.

Conference Indicators

GIVEN THE INTERSECTIONALITY OF OUR FOUR EVENT TOPICS, we encourage you to attend sessions for any event. This convergence of topics is your opportunity to take a cross-functional approach to student success. During each programming block, sessions will have an acronym indicating the conference for which it was selected. Please note: a conference indicator does not preclude you from attending a session if it is of interest. Conference indicators are:

- APDA
  Assessment, Persistence, and Data Analytics

- CTAG
  Closing the Achievement Gap

- FGSS
  First-generation Student Success

- SFWC
  Student Financial Wellness

PERSONALIZE YOUR LEARNING

NASPA Center for First-generation Student Success

The Center for First-generation Student Success, an initiative of NASPA and The Suder Foundation, is the premier resource for evidence-based practices, professional development, and knowledge creation for the higher education community to advance the success of first-generation students. Since launching in 2017, the Center has completed a national landscape analysis of first-generation student success programs, opened a comprehensive new website, kicked off an online professional development series, hosted a national convening on first-generation student success, co-hosted the inaugural First-Generation Celebration Day, and engaged with colleagues through conference presentations and events.

To learn more, please visit the Center at firstgen.naspa.org and follow them on Twitter @FirstgenCenter and be sure to use #FirstgenForward to share your experiences!

Professional Competencies

IN JULY 2015, the NASPA Board of Directors approved Professional Competency Areas for Student Affairs Practitioners. The set of professional competency areas is intended to define the broad professional knowledge, skills, and in some cases, the attitudes expected of student affairs professionals, regardless of their area of specialization or positional role within the field. Within the conference program, sessions that fall into particular competency areas are marked with the icons as indicated below.

- A/S Advising and Supporting
- PPF Personal and Ethical Foundations
- AER Assessment, Evaluation, and Research
- SJI Social Justice and Inclusion
- LPG Law, Policy, and Governance
- SLD Student Learning and Development
- LEAD Leadership
- TECH Technology
- OHR Organizational and Human Resources
- VHP Values, Philosophy, and History

Bridget Burns, Ed.D.
Executive Director, University Innovation Alliance

Named one of the “Most Innovative People in Higher Education” by Washington Monthly, Bridget Burns is the founding executive director of the University Innovation Alliance (UIA). The UIA is the ground-breaking national consortium of public research universities working together to test and scale innovations that close achievement gaps and improve outcomes for all students. Since its founding in 2014, the UIA campuses have increased their low-income degrees awarded by 29% (26,000 additional low-income graduates to date). The Alliance has been featured in national outlets like 60 Minutes, The New York Times, The Washington Post, and Fast Company, and has inspired the formation of other university networks working to improve postsecondary success for low-income students.

For the past decade, she has advised university presidents, system chancellors, and state and federal policy leaders on strategies to expand access to higher education, address costs, and promote completion for students of all backgrounds. She is a former university system chief of staff, state higher education senior policy advisor, higher education governing board member, American Council on Education fellow, and National Associate with the National Center for Public Policy and Higher Education. Bridget first entered higher education by attending a community college with a Pell Grant. She went on to complete her Ed.D in Higher Education, Leadership and Policy from Vanderbilt University.

Tim Bono, Ph.D.
Assistant Dean of Assessment and Analytics in the Division of Student Affairs, Washington University

Dr. Tim Bono is Assistant Dean for Assessment and Analytics in the Division of Student Affairs at Washington University in St. Louis, Missouri. He is also a faculty member in the Department of Psychological & Brain Sciences at WashU where his teaching and research focus on positive psychology and college student development. His work has been featured in a number of national media outlets including NBC News, CNN, Fast Company, and the Associated Press. Over the last decade, thousands of students have taken his popular courses on the Psychology of Young Adulthood and the Science of Happiness. He summarizes the research from those courses, along with how his students have put that information into practice in their own lives, in his recent book entitled, When Likes Aren’t Enough: A Crash Course in the Science of Happiness.

Dr. Rebecca Covarrubias is an Associate Professor of Psychology and Faculty Director of the Student Success Equity Research Center at UC Santa Cruz. As a social and cultural psychologist, she examines the importance of reflecting the cultural strengths and practices of students from diverse backgrounds in educational settings as a way to foster inclusion and equity. A first-generation faculty member, she co-launched UC Santa Cruz’s First Generation Initiative to foster a sense of community among first-generation students, staff, and faculty. For her research, teaching, and community engagement, Dr. Covarrubias was awarded a 2018 UC Santa Cruz Chancellor’s Achievement Award for Diversity, the 2018 Society for Research in Child Development Latino Caucus Early Career Award, and the 2017 Society of Psychological Study of Social Issues Michele Alexander Early Career Award. With her team of student researchers in the Culture and Achievement Collaborative, she works to translate these findings into actionable practices that can shift the culture of institutions, and can help students thrive.

Dr. Spiva’s nearly 25-year career in postsecondary education spans a range of executive leadership, general management, public affairs, operations, and academic officer positions. She is the former President & CEO of College Success Foundation (CSF), a national non-profit college readiness, access, success, and scholarship organization, which serves nearly 12,000 low-income students annually, through an integrated system of academic, financial, social, and emotional supports to help them access and complete a postsecondary education. Dr. Spiva has also held various positions with the U.S. Department of Education in Washington, D.C., and Atlanta, Georgia, in the Offices of Postsecondary Education, Student Financial Assistance, and Policy, Planning and Innovation, culminating in her service as Region IV Public Affairs Director in the southeast regional Office of the Secretary of Education.

In addition to having authored numerous research articles, Dr. Spiva also co-authored the NAACP Image Award-nominated book, Daring to Educate: The Legacy of the Early Spelman College Presidents (1881-1953). In 2011, she was awarded the prestigious Turknett Leadership Character Award for outstanding leadership in the nonprofit sector. Dr. Spiva earned her undergraduate degree in economics from Spelman College, her master’s degree in public policy from the University of Chicago, and her Ph.D. in higher education from Georgia State University.

Presenter(s): Deb Garrett, Interim Executive Director, Council for the Advancement of Standards in Higher Education; Jen Wells, Director of Assessment, Office of Institutional Effectiveness (OIE), Kennesaw State University

In this interactive session, participants will learn and practice detailed steps to implementing Council for the Advancement of Standards in Higher Education (CAS) standards for program review. Through the use of case studies, individual and small group activities, individual advisement, and discussion, participants will learn how to prepare a unit or division for the program review process intended to foster substantive program improvement. Participants will leave with concrete action steps and tools for implementing a CAS program review on their own campus.

10:00 a.m. — 5:30 p.m.  FIRST FORWARD PRE-CONFERENCE WORKSHOP

First Forward is a recognition program for higher education institutions demonstrating a commitment to first-generation student success. A key component to First Forward is professional development and community building; this pre-conference workshop serves as the kick-off of the inaugural cohort. Representatives from the 80 First Forward institutions will have an opportunity to interact with peer institutions and engage in an in-depth review of existing campus-wide efforts, and identify areas to strengthen and advance the success of first-generation students.

This workshop is open only to pre-registered participants from institutions who received the First Forward designation.

Addressing Financial Wellness at The Ohio State University

Presenter(s): Blake Marble, Director of the Office of Student Wellness Center, The Ohio State University; Benjamin Raines, Coordinator of Financial Wellness, The Ohio State University

Scarlet and Gray Financial (SGF) is a nationally recognized financial wellness program housed in the Office of Student Life Student Wellness Center at The Ohio State University. SGF supports thousands of Ohio State students each year through one-on-one peer financial coaching, presentations and online resources. Attendees will be exposed to a comprehensive review of the SGF program and steps required to develop a financial coaching program in the higher education setting. Presenters will supply information about the recruitment, selection and training of volunteer peer educators, including an in depth look of the Leadership Development Program (LDP), a for credit course taken by all new financial coaches. Moreover, strategies will be provided to identify key stakeholders, build partnerships and institutionalize a financial coaching program. Lastly, presenters will relay how assessment and data collection inform SGF’s evidence-based practices of financial education and how financial education impacts the holistic well-being of students. To conclude this interactive session, presenters will lead a planning activity to assist attendees in developing a strategy for addressing the financial wellness of students on their campus.

Assessment 101: Introduction to Student Affairs Assessment

Presenter(s): Shaun Boren, Director of Student Affairs Assessment and Research, University of Florida; Gwen Fears, Associate Dean of Students, Miami University; Darby Roberts, Director of Student Life Studies, Texas A&M University; Pamelyn Shefman, Director of Planning and Assessment, University of Houston; Tim Kresse, Director of Budget & Technology, Division of Student Life, Miami University

This pre-conference workshop is a “boot camp” for student affairs assessment. The program offers an opportunity to develop your skills on assessment as a practice while covering the basics you need to either enhance the work you are already doing or start something new for your area or campus. In this session participants will learn from presentations, as well as engage in practical workshops within small groups that represent your campus experience so you can get the most from your time and make assessment more salient in your work. As a result of attending, participants will become familiar with approaches for departmental review and accreditation in student affairs while having the opportunity to create an assessment plan for a program including: student learning outcomes, identifying data sources, and reporting strategies.

The purpose of this pre-conference workshop is to provide a foundation to develop the analytics capacity for student affairs assessment professionals. Student affairs assessment as a field continues to evolve with the increased use of business intelligence and predictive analytics. This workshop will focus on organizational readiness and implementation strategies including: ethics; data access; interdisciplinary team building; organizational maturity; and, student affairs use cases and planning considerations. As a result of attending, participants will have the chance to: develop an assessment about their organizational culture to ethically and effectively use analytics; gain an understanding of the IT requirements for data access and reporting; develop strategies to build an interdisciplinary team; and, understand implementation strategies.

| Increasing the Institutional Sustainability of Your First-generation Student Program | Amy Baldwin, Director, Department of Student Transitions, University of Central Arkansas; LaTonya (LT) Rease-Miles, Director, First Year Experience and Strategic Initiatives, University of California, Los Angeles; James K. Winfield, Assistant Director for Faculty Development, University 101 Programs, University of South Carolina | Peninsula 1 |

Advocates of first-generation college students are often the most enthusiastic higher education professionals on their campuses, and with that excitement, it is easy to be affected by the challenges that come with building sustainable student support programs. This session will focus on identifying common obstacles to program growth and sustainability as well as creating viable pathways around those obstacles. Specifically, the workshop participants will learn how to increase both grassroots and top-down buy-in, deal strategically with resistance, and develop a plan for weathering inevitable institutional culture change.

The session is sponsored by the National Resource Center on the First-Year Experience and Students in Transition in partnership with the Center for First-generation Student Success.
The Current & Future of College Completion: Critical Student Affairs Practices
Presenter(s): Dhanfu Elston, Vice President for Strategy, Complete College America; Nikolas Huot, Strategy Director, Complete College America

Student affairs practitioners must find new and innovative methods to contribute to national and institutional completion efforts which are critical in an environment of sometimes competing demands between policy-makers and enrollment goals. Complete College America is a national non-profit dedicated to increasing the number of Americans with quality career certificates or college degrees. Session participants will receive updates on national “Game Changer” strategies and proven practices that are accelerating completion and attainment rates throughout the country. More institutions are developing guided pathways, working to decrease time to degree, and placing greater emphasis on career outcomes. CCA will work with participants on the creation of plans associated with the most high impact practices, including a discussion of how practitioners are transitioning into student success roles.

First Time Attendee Session
Presenter(s): Jordana Taylor, Associate Director, Recruitment, Engagement, and Volunteerism, NASPA

As a First-time Attendee, get excited to experience unparalleled education to help you navigate a variety of topics on your campus around student success in higher education. Join us for this session to learn not only about the various educational sessions, exhibits, and networking opportunities at this year’s event, but to also learn about ways that NASPA can enhance your personal and professional growth as a higher education professional both during and after the event.

Conference Welcome and Opening Panel Discussion
Moderator: Kevin Kruger, President & CEO, NASPA

Panelists: Tim Bono, Assistant Dean for Assessment and Analytics in the Division of Student Affairs, Washington University in St. Louis; Bridget Burns, Executive Director, University Innovation Alliance; Rebecca Covarrubias, Associate Professor of Psychology and Faculty Director of the Student Success Equity Research Center, University of California, Santa Cruz; Yolanda Watson Spiva, President, Complete College America

Compassion and Generosity: A Focused Response to Student Success after Hurricane Florence

Presenter(s): Desirée Rieckenberg, Dean of Students, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill; Katie Cartmell, Associate Director, Retention, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; Jennifer Drake, Team Lead, Student Administrative Business Analysts, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; Jacquelyn Copeland, Senior Associate Director, Scholarships and Student Aid, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill

In September 2018 Hurricane Florence hit the coast of North Carolina, leaving 29 North Carolina counties declared as Federal Disaster Areas. This presentation will walk attendees through the process of how University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill responded to the needs of students, describing how administrative offices collaborated across 14 offices to standing up the Student Success Hub for Florence Recovery to support students with academic, financial and personal needs following the storm. Participants will have the opportunity to draft their own plan for eliminating barriers and closing the achievement gap on their campus to support student success during times of campus-wide impact.

Eyes Wide Open: Talking With Students in Low-Earning Fields About Financing Graduate/Professional Education

Presenter(s): Lillian Lammers, Director, Stewardship and Vocational Planning, Vanderbilt University Divinity School

Sometimes big hearts come with smaller paychecks for students who pursue careers in fields that require costly graduate or professional education, but often lead to lower-paying professional roles (teachers, social workers, ministers, nonprofit leaders, etc.). This program is intended for those who formally or informally advise students about the financial realities of pursuing professional/graduate education. Reviewing the research findings and resources developed as part of a grant initiative funded by the Lilly Endowment, Inc., the presenter will offer a broad picture of the challenges faced by these individuals, and strategic choices that can be made to minimize debt in route to these professions.

First-generation Student Success: A Landscape Analysis of Programs and Services at Four-year Institutions

Presenter(s): Sarah E. Whitley, Senior Director, Center for First-generation Student Success, NASPA

Join the Center for First-generation Student Success for a look into findings and recommendations from the national landscape analysis of first-generation student success programs at four-year institutions. The landscape report, using insights from university leaders and practitioners, association professionals, and students, considers priorities, current approaches and limitations, resources, and key collaborations for supporting first-generation students. Participants will explore the deeply intersectional first-generation identity and the approaches institutions are taking to better understand this population and scale supports.

Helping First-generation Undergrads Understand why and how to Pursue a Doctorate Degree

Presenter(s): Kate Torrey, Director, McNair Scholars & LSAMP Programs, Rochester Institute of Technology; Sharitta Gross, Assistant Director of Student Development, Rochester Institute of Technology

For most first-generation college students, a Ph.D. feels out of reach. This session examines tools used at RIT to increase the number of first-generation undergraduate students pursuing Ph.D. programs. These tools include a “PhD Exploration” program, which utilizes faculty mentors for lab tours, workshops, and research experiences; a “Roadmap to Graduate School,” which provides a timeline of tasks to help students be competitive graduate school candidates; and a “Pathways to Graduate School” class to help students write fellowship/grad school applications.

Hot Spots Matter: Exploring Place-Based Sense of Belonging on College Campuses

Presenter(s): Renee Delgado-Riley, Director of Research and Assessment for Student Life, University of Oregon; Laurie Woodward, Director, Erb Memorial Union, University of Oregon

The student union is the heart of campus; no Oregon graduate has majored in student unions, but it would be hard to find a Duck whose college experience wasn’t somehow shaped by the Union. Students’ sense of belonging about physical places is being explored. Utilizing belonging measures and heat-map techniques, this study explored students’ sense of belonging at the Union. Results about “favorite” places, why they matter and the methods we employed to get to our results will be shared.

Immersion Programs Designed for First-generation College Students

Presenter(s): Andrea Santillan, Assistant Director, LEAD Scholars Program, Santa Clara University

Local and global immersion experiences are designed to help students see the world with new eyes, to recognize unjust suffering of marginalized communities, allow those experiences to inform their vocational discernment and consider their place in the world. First-generation students often have a unique connection to marginalized communities and process privilege and justice differently compared to their continuing generation peers. This session aims to highlight the importance of first-generation only immersions, and describe how to create and garner support for them.

Legacy Scholars Curriculum and Praxis: An Ecological Systems and Critical Pedagogy Approach to First-generation

Presenter(s): Daniel Cairo, Interim Assistant Dean of Students, and Director, Student Diversity and Inclusion, Westminster College; Julian Mendez, Assistant Professor, Psychology, Westminster College; Madeline Gere, Legacy Program Coordinator, Westminster College; Kari Lindsey, Coordinator, Student Diversity and Inclusion Center, Westminster College

Legacy Scholars is an innovative four-year scholarship program for first-generation, low income, and minority students. In its third year, Legacy is rendering retention and academic success. Legacy’s unique take on student development, student success, and critical pedagogy offers contributions and interventions to current practices; specifically, a new framework for contextualizing cultural capital, success, and learning itself. In this session, participants will learn about best-practices for developing and evaluating curricular and co-curricular engagement for their first-generation initiatives.

One Step Further: Preparing and Supporting First-generation Students Entering Doctoral and Professional School

Presenter(s): Emily Scivolette, Associate Dean, Academic and Student Affairs, University of California, Los Angeles - School of Law; Tony Tolbert, Director, Learning Environment and Academic Affairs, University of California, Los Angeles - School of Law; Malissa Barnwell-Scott, Director, Student Support and First-generation Professionals Program, University of California, Los Angeles - School of Law

Only 4% of first-generation students attend a doctoral or professional program after achieving a bachelor’s degree. USC Trojans and UCLA Bruins set aside their rivalry to collaborate on this important session about supporting first-generation students preparing to attend doctoral or professional school. This presentation will review current trends in postgraduate education relating to first-generation students, discuss best practices in supporting students preparing for doctoral or professional school, and discuss programs available to first-generation students when they arrive at our institutions.

Presenter(s): Tracie Gibson, Director, Office of Student Success and Diversity, College of Natural Sciences, and Program Director, Louis Stokes Alliance for Minority Participation and William Lee-Science Impact Program, University of Massachusetts, Amherst; Linda Ziegenbein, Academic and Diversity Advisor, University of Massachusetts, Amherst

Presenters in this session will introduce BioPioneers, a living learning community for first-generation life sciences majors at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. Combining academic and social support with a sense of community, BioPioneers is envisioned as a way to integrate well-established high impact practices to encourage and retain students academically and psychologically. Through presentation and discussion, we consider the role learning communities can play to bolster diversity and support underserved STEM students.

Social Mobility and Sustainable Organizational Change at Old Dominion University

Presenter(s): Mike Embry, Associate Vice President, Partner Success, InsideTrack; Don Stansberry, Dean of Students & Associate Vice President, Old Dominion University; Jodi Rafkin, Coach Manager, InsideTrack

While many institutions are committed to improving college access and success for underrepresented students, enhancing student support in a way that’s financially sustainable remains a challenge, and introducing these new practices throughout a department or entire institution is no easy task. This session will discuss how Old Dominion University used organizational change science to implement student success coaching, effectively improving student outcomes and the institution’s bottom line. Participants will receive actionable takeaways on effective institutional change and the power of student support.

Successfully Navigating Culture of Evidence Challenges and Managing the End Game

Presenter(s): Marguerite Culp, Executive Director, Maggie Culp Consulting

More colleges and universities are implementing cultures of evidence, though there is limited proof of these efforts having an impact on student success. The presenters will explore the leadership, planning, execution, and end-game challenges, traps, and land mines that student affairs professionals face in implementing cultures of evidence; offering concrete strategies to deal with each; highlighting best practices implemented at innovative institutions; and providing instruments that participants can use to assess the culture of evidence efforts on their own campuses.

Using Data to Create a Student-Ready Institution  | Melissa Irvin, Assistant Dean, Advising & Analytics, University of South Florida | Longboat |
|          | In higher education, we focus the bulk of our programming targeting populations based on long-standing assumptions about students not being ready for college. With the increasing interest in big data, student affairs professionals have increased access to student's pre-college information. In this session, we will examine how to use data to address institutional biases and adjust institutional culture to focus on creating a college ready for the students it enrolls, not the ones it thinks it deserves. |          |

|          | As institutions focus on data as a powerful student success tool, the volume of data – and questions it may potentially answer – is growing. Understanding how to systematically review and evaluate the usefulness of data is critical, particularly when considering formative data – early information about in-progress experiences, behaviors, and activities that are often foundational to student success. This session will describe a simple framework for evaluating formative data. We will use concrete examples, both learning analytics and non-cognitive data, to illustrate not only the usefulness of the framework but also the lessons learned about formative data and its potential and pitfalls for impacting student success. |          |

What’s Really Going on with Retention? A Guide for Student Affairs Practitioners

Presenter(s): Charlene Herreid, Director, Student Affairs Research and Assessment, New York University; Thomas Miller, Vice President, Student Affairs, University of South Florida; Valeria Garcia, Associate Provost, Office of Decision Support, University of South Florida

Student affairs practitioners need detailed information about student retention and graduation patterns over time at their institutions to help develop interventions to improve student success. This data may not be readily available in a comprehensive form from college or university data sources. This presentation provides an easily understood framework for organizing student retention and graduation data available on campus for use by student affairs practitioners, articulating tools and language to communicate needs for information not currently provided.

Presenter(s): Michele Yovanovich, Assistant Vice President for Campus Life and Dean of Students, Florida Gulf Coast University; Bill Reynolds, Director Lucas Center for Faculty Development, Florida Gulf Coast University; Michele Yovanovich, Assistant VP for Campus Life and Dean of Students., Florida Gulf Coast University

This program will be a dynamic discussion about a collaboration to develop an innovative student success program that partners student consultants with faculty members for the purpose of enriching teaching and learning and promoting student growth. In the Student-Faculty Partnership Program, student partners observe faculty each week and meet with their partners to provide feedback about teaching and learning. Preliminary results suggest an increase in students’ self-confidence in their communication and overall academic skills and an enhanced sense of belonging.

Addressing Food Insecurity Holistically

Presenter(s): Michaela Martin, Assistant Director, Student Life Student Wellness Center, The Ohio State University

Students cannot succeed if they are hungry, yet many college students do not know where their next meal will come from. This session will focus on national data regarding food insecurity amongst undergraduate students and will highlight ways that Ohio State University is addressing the matter through a holistic well-being lens. Attendees will gain an understanding of the impact the food insecurity has on the whole student, and ways that they can better support students who identify as being food insecure.

Analytics, Advising and Alliances: How 10,000 Students are Changing Advising Practices

Presenter(s): Ryan Maltese, Project Director, University Innovation Alliance, Georgia State University; Christina King, Associate Director & University Inn, Purdue University; Danielle Aming, MAAPS Advisor, University of Central Florida; Alex Aljets, University Innovation Alliance Fellow, Oregon State University

Four years ago, a groundbreaking collaborative of 11 public institutions, the University Innovation Alliance (UIA), launched a randomized-controlled trial of 10,000 students to understand the impact of proactive analytics-based advising on improving success for low-income and first-generation college students. As analytics-based advising is being adopted across higher education, UIA institutions have started to uncover how organizational context, advising design, and data infrastructure impact supports for first-generation students. In this session, practitioners will share interim findings and key considerations for student affairs professionals.

Bluejay First: A Strategic Approach to the First-generation Experience at Small Colleges

Presenter(s): Jasmin Robinson, Director, Diversity and Inclusion, Elmhurst College

National data and recent literature shows an increase in first-generation students attending college. However, institutions continue to struggle with addressing the complex needs of this population. This session explores how an innovative first-generation program, which includes administrators, faculty, staff, students, and alumni, fosters a sense of belonging. The presenter will provide resources for attendees to use at their respective institutions. Professionals seeking insight on program development at small liberal arts colleges will benefit from attending this session.

Building a First-generation Residential Community from the Ground Up

Presenter(s): Brittany Abraham, Program Coordinator, Community Support, George Washington University; Bridgette Behling, Director, Community Support and Leadership, George Washington University; Marcella Wong, Area Coordinator, George Washington University

This session provides an overview of the process for building a residential community for first-generation college students. Attendees will learn strategies to effectively advocate, build a budget, and develop program assessments. Additionally, presenters will discuss how to engage multiple stakeholders and recommendations on how other institutions can adopt or enhance this type of community on their campuses.

Engaging First-generation College Alumni: Providing Opportunities to Pay It Forward

Presenter(s): Andrea Santillan, Assistant Director, LEAD Scholars Program, Santa Clara University

While little research exists on first-generation college alumni, existing literature on alumni of color and current first-generation college students suggests that first-generation alumni have much to contribute and gain from their alma maters. This session explores how one program is engaging with alumni by supporting their professional and personal development, as well as providing opportunities to give back both financially and through mentorship. Turning Data into Stories

Presenter(s): Jennifer O’Brien, Director, Communications for Student Life, Miami University; Gwen Fears, Associate Dean of Students, Miami University

Storytelling is quickly becoming a buzzword in student affairs (and beyond). While many professionals recognize the value of a thoughtful, well-told story, they don’t know how to do it. We’re past the days of closing the loop with a 37 page report handed to a supervisor. In this session, presenters will provide concrete action steps to how to craft a narrative— and what means— with your data. Participants will hear examples and turn their data into a meaningful story.

Developing an Interconnected Assessment Strategy

Presenter(s): Rihab Saadeddine, Director, Strategic Planning and Management, Rowan University; Abbygail Tull Langham, Director, Assessment and Strategic Planning Auburn University; Anne Lundquist, Assistant Vice President, Campus Adoption, Campus Labs; Rohan Thakkar, Campus Adoption Manager, Campus Labs

Within a division of student affairs, it’s common to see a scattered level of assessment competency, data collection, and reporting which leads to a disjointed narrative around the impact of our programs and services. It’s time to shift this narrative so that we can begin to view assessment not as an isolated activity, but instead a cyclical process that is connected to strategic priorities and owned by the whole institution. Join our session to learn how assessment in student affairs has evolved in the past ten years and how two campuses have developed an interconnected assessment process that focuses on intentionality and strategic use of data.

Reading Between the Retention Rates: Examining First-generation Student Transitions in the First Year

Moderator: Sonja Ardoin, Assistant Professor, Student Affairs Administration Program, Appalachian State University

Presenter(s): Amelia Bickel, Director, First Year Experience and Retention, University of Alabama;

It is well validated in the literature that first generation students are at a higher risk for attrition in post-secondary education (Ishanti, 2003). Research and practice has focused on the critical first year to make an impact in short and long-term student success. This work used qualitative methods to examine participants in the Legacy Scholars program focusing on their transition, growth, and recommendations for institutions of higher education. The themes that emerged describe high levels of pressure, an acknowledged knowledge gap, the importance of social community, threat of financial barriers, and suggestions that can inform our practice in serving this growing population.

The Lived Experiences of First-generation College Students of Color: A Phenomenological Study
Moderator: Sonja Ardoin, Assistant Professor, Student Affairs Administration Program, Appalachian State University
Presenter(s): Talisha Adams, Assistant Director, Student Success Center, University of Tennessee, Knoxville

The purpose of this qualitative, phenomenological study was to understand the lived experiences of first-generation college students of color at a Predominantly White Institution (PWI). The overarching research question examined how first-generation students of color experienced college at one PWI. Four major themes were revealed: (1) college degree is a means to a better lifestyle, (2) money always matters, (3) heightened sense of safety concerns, and (4) desire for a supportive multicultural campus environment.

A Wrap-Up Approach to Student Care and Support
Presenter(s): Abigail Brumfield, Coordinator, Office of the Dean of Students, University of Tennessee–Knoxville; Olivia Stevens, Graduate Assistant, University of Tennessee–Knoxville

National headlines indicate food insecurity is prevalent across all institutional types. Higher education professionals are keenly positioned to combat this issue with current and adaptable student support services. Presenters in this workshop will share an in-depth guide to the development and execution of a short-term meal assistance program at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville. The topics include offering guidance on defining program philosophy, developing integral campus partnerships, and leveraging a wrap-around model to provide holistic student support.

Beyond Financial Aid: Supporting Students on the Margin Through Collaboration and Care
Presenter(s): Christopher Grillo, Associate Dean, Finance and Administration, Boston College; Yvonne McBarnett, Director, Montserrat Coalition Program, Boston College

Student debt is a significant issue in higher education, with potential implications negatively affecting personal and societal economic growth. The mission of Montserrat at Boston College is to provide undergraduate students with access and support to all areas of student life not incorporated in a financial aid package. They strive to guide students in fulfilling the Jesuit initiative holistically, supporting students at the highest level of financial need. Presenters will share best practices for supporting students outside traditional financial aid packages.

Building Confidence in Data Analytics: Overcoming the Four Themes in Data Distrust
Presenter(s): Amanda Hagman, Data Wrangler, Utah State University

Big data is poised to transform higher education through an unprecedented ability to provide actionable insights that help students and improve university operations, yet this hope is often met with an equal amount of distrust. Higher education professionals now have sophisticated statistical tools at their fingertips, but it is necessary to attend to the cultural perceptions of big data. Distrust hinders acceptance of tools and delays (or even derails) attempts to become a data-informed institution. The presenter will address the four major roots of data distrust and provide confidence-building solutions based in self-determination theory and the life cycle of sustainable analytics.

Creating a Culture of Assessment
Presenter(s): George Still, Director, Assessment, University of North Carolina–Greensboro

Is assessment an afterthought in your department or area? How can assessment be used to tell your story? The presenter in this session will provide strategies for developing embedded assessment practices into your team. Attendees will gain specific examples for how to build a culture of assessment, and gather strategies for how to share data to external audiences to better communicate the story of their departments.

Five Ways to Engage Facilities and Housekeeping Staff With First-generation Students
Presenter(s): LaTonya Rease Miles, Director, First Year Experience, University of California, Los Angeles

Currently, there is a renewed interest in identifying faculty and staff mentors to support first-generation students. Facilities and service workers should be included in this planning, as they often provide informal mentoring and social capital for this population, although this work typically is not recognized or valued. Presenters will offer concrete ways to integrate and to engage these allies and “institutional agents” in student success programming.

High-Impact Retention Practices
Presenter(s): Kyle Van Duser, Assistant Faculty Specialist, and Director, First Year Programs, University of Hawaii at Manoa

GPA has been the conventional barometer for student success for both students and the institution. The presenter for this program will discuss the significant impact a peer-led learning community model has on first-year student GPA. The ANCOVA study found that the peer-led learning community model produced a 0.2 higher GPA average for participants, which translates to a letter grade increase in coursework. Students who participated in the learning community had on average 6-7% higher persistence rates compared to their peers who did not participate.

Mentoring Student Employees for Success
Presenter(s): Christian Corrales, Director, On-Campus Student Employment, The University of Texas at El Paso

Data shows that two-thirds of undergraduates at four-year institutions are employed. Among first-generation college students, one-fifth of full-time, first-year and two-fifths of full-time undergraduate, seniors work while enrolled in college. Higher education professionals and faculty members, recognize the impact that work has on first-generation students’ persistence in college and completion of a bachelor’s degree. Presenters aim to support improvements in student employment practices by identifying resources for student employee supervisors, exploring ideas for mentoring students through professional development, and connecting performance evaluations to life-long professional practices.

Easy to Implement Innovation to Enhance Student Success
Presenter(s): Don Pitchford, National Program Director, Higher Education Partnerships and Marketing Engagement, ACT

The presenter will share insight about recent ACT innovation, research, and case studies that focus on enhancing post-secondary student success. Information will be shared about ACT’s holistic framework of student success and how these principles and tools can assist with advising, retention, supplemental learning, and institutional effectiveness initiatives. Be sure to check out this poster to learn how many of these services can easily be applied to practice.

Equity as an Outcome: Addressing the Achievement Gap for Men of Color
Presenter(s): Jermaine Wright, Associate Vice President, Student Affairs, Southern Connecticut State University

Higher education is an ideal area to examine the equitable delivery of a public service, education, especially given the persistent race gap in education access and achievement. Despite the gains people of color have made over the centuries, men of color initiatives may be needed now more than ever. This poster will examine the use of data by administrators of college men of color initiatives as a way to address equity and improve outcomes such as persistence and completion.

Friends or Enemies? Predicting and Mitigating Potential Roommate Conflict
Presenter(s): Ling Ning, Quantitative Research Analyst, University of Colorado, Boulder; Amy Biesterfeld, Director, Strategic Planning and Assessment at Housing and Dining Services, University of Colorado Boulder

Roommate conflict is detrimental to the college experience. The present study evaluates the reliability and validity of a survey assessing roommates’ like-mindedness on multiple dimensions (or risk factors). It then uses the proposed risk level based on validated dimensions to predict roommate satisfaction. Whether a roommate agreement was signed is also included to examine if it moderates the relationships between risk level and roommate satisfaction. The research findings will unravel how roommate relationships are impacted by different risk factors.

Is the Juice Worth the Squeeze? Retention Pitfalls when Recruiting Out-Of-State Students
Presenter(s): Kyle Van Duser, Assistant Faculty Specialist, and Director, First Year Programs, University of Hawaii at Manoa

This study employed a regression analysis to determine whether or not tuition pricing played a role in impacting first-year student retention. Over 5,000 students from a mid-sized public research university on the Pacific rim were included in the study. The results demonstrated that students who were paying higher tuition had a higher probability of leaving at the end of their first year.

Measuring Male Gender Role Strain in a Sexual Assault Climate Survey

Presenter(s): Lisa Maletsky, Coordinator, Student Persistence Research, University of Nevada, Reno; Jennifer Lowman, Director, Student Persistence Research, University of Nevada, Reno; Kimberly Thomas, Dean of Students, University of Nevada, Reno

Toxic masculinity is a buzz phrase getting attention in the media. In the literature, it is studied as male gender role strain (MGRS) and is found to increase violence, especially sexual violence. The poster will discuss measurement and results of MGRS within the context of a sexual assault climate study. We will deconstruct campus-wide discussions about toxic masculinity and its role in disrupting campus climates. As we contextualize results, we invite participants to debate our recommendations.

Is Toxic Masculinity a Problem on My Campus? Maximizing Student Success through Strategic Integration of Academic and Co-curricularDatasets

Presenter(s): Judith Redling, Associate Provost, Academic Services, Drew University

Data-driven retention practices require attention to academic and co-curricular experiences. Academic and student affairs representatives from Drew University will share the framework of datasets they’ve developed. The framework includes data captured at critical intervals in the undergraduate experience: non-cognitive assessments, academic engagement and alerts, co-curricular engagement monitored by the behavioral response team, and systematic recording of interventions/resource utilization are among the datasets discussed. This poster will share tangible ways that such datasets can support student success and retention.

Predicting Student Performance in High D, F, and Withdrawal Courses: Indicators Hindering Success

Presenter(s): Kyle Van Duser, Assistant Faculty Specialist, and Director, First Year Programs, University of Hawaii at Manoa

This study investigates factors related to the failure rate of students in an Introduction to General Chemistry course at a mid-sized, public research university. The sample consisted of 595 undergraduate students and used binary logistic regression to analyze the data. Findings indicate individual instructors were a significant predictor of students’ grade in the Introduction to General Chemistry course. The students’ ACT math scores, SAT math scores, and high school GPA were also significant predictors.

Research-Based Insights Over a 9-Year Span Transforming Oklahoma Higher Education

Presenter(s): Bradley Ward, Director, Veteran Education, Texas Tech University

An emerging body of innovative research from the Oklahoma System of Higher Education sheds light on the Post 9/11 G.I. Bill’s 9-year impact on higher education. This state-level study, the first of its kind, explores the 9-year impact on academic performance measures, enrollment, transfer rates, graduation, tuition and more to highlight the transformational impact military-connected students are making in higher education. This poster is designed to stimulate further support, understanding, and collaboration on serving and advancing the interests of military-connected students through research-based insights.
The Impact of Academic Probation Policy on Student Success
Presenter(s): Corey Zink, Director, Student Services, Idaho State University

Many students that fail to persist are those experiencing academic challenges as a result of time spent on academic probation. The outcomes of probationary students generally impart a negative impact on institutional student success rates. For this reason, many institutions offer interventions designed to assist this population; however, a high percentage of probationary students still withdraw from the institution. This poster takes a closer look at the probationary population, recent research of the presenter, and offers data concerning effective interventionary approaches to intervention.

Towards an Understanding of First-generation, Gen-Z Students: Preliminary Results from the University Learning Outcomes Assessment
Presenter(s): Pietro Sasso, Assistant Professor, and Program Director, College Student Personnel Administration, Southern Illinois University Edwardsville; Ashleigh Goedereis, Academic Advisor, Southern Illinois University Edwardsville

Scant evidence exists providing an in-depth understanding regarding Generation Z, first-generation students. This poster will profile emerging research related to Generation Z, first-generation traditional undergraduate students from a national sample drawn from the University Learning Outcomes Assessment survey (UNiLOA). Outcomes will be connected to a new model of student success, the Dynamic Student Development Meta-Theory (DSDM), a new model of student success. Presenters will integrate DSDM and UNiLOA results into best practices that support Generation Z students.

Using Predictive Analytics and Financial Aid to Increase Institutional Retention
Presenter(s): Kyle Van Duser, Assistant Faculty Specialist, and Director, First Year Programs, University of Hawaii at Manoa

This study employed propensity score matching and regression analysis to determine whether or not a retention scholarship pilot program at a mid-sized, public research university was effective at increasing first-year retention. The scholarship pilot used a predictive logistic regression model for identifying recipients and automatically awarded students $5,000. Findings demonstrated that students who did not receive the scholarship were two times more likely to depart. Longitudinally, nonscholarship recipients were 1.4 times more likely to depart at the end of their sophomore year.

We Think It’s Important, but Do They? Graduating Transfer Student Perspectives on Involvement and Success
Presenter(s): Amelia (Amy) Bickel, Director, First Year Experience and Retention Initiatives, The University of Alabama

Few studies have focused on the involvement experiences of transfer students at four-year institutions and the impact of those on their degree attainment. This poster will share results from a qualitative study to highlight the perspectives of graduating transfer students regarding academic and social involvement and whether or not those experiences were important for achieving the baccalaureate degree. The implications of this research can inform four-year institutions regarding ways to serve incoming transfer students and support their degree completion post-transfer.

Money Matters: How Student-Centered Success Strategies Help Students Complete College Without Unnecessary Financial Burden & Help the Institution’s Bottom Line

Presenter(s): Yolanda Watson Spiva, President, Complete College America

When institutions focus on student success and their college completion outcomes, they do whatever is necessary to ensure that students complete college on time. In this scenario, revenue is not the focus, it becomes the byproduct of student completion. Students’ financial wellness is key to their college completion and their life prospects after college. Further, when colleges invest in their students and remember that they will inevitably become alumni whom they’ll want to transition into donors, they begin the cultivation process while students are still students, not after they are financially successful but have become jaded about the institution based on their student experience. Dr. Watson Spiva will share the Complete College America “Game Changers” that help students with an on-time completion, as well as a new way to look at students based on the longer view of students as investments in the institution’s financial future.

A Self-sustaining Peer-to-Peer Mentoring Model for All Students
Presenter(s): Hillary Campbell, Director, Undergraduate Programs, University of Texas at Dallas; Hilary Roush Freeman, Program Specialist, The University of Texas at Dallas

Diverse student populations call for personalized engagement initiatives when the desired institutional result is full student retention. Highly-specialized programs, while often successful in retaining students within a small or narrowly-focused population, can incur high financial and human capital costs to the institution. Strategically engaging larger student populations towards effective retention requires innovative usage of funds, personnel, and assessment measures. In its sixth year of implementation, the UT Dallas Freshman Mentor Program harnesses university resources and highly-engaged upperclassmen, in partnership towards facilitating a successful transition to the rigors of university life for incoming freshman students. Refined processes for recruitment, candidate evaluation and selection, pairing, leadership development, service learning, and analyzing program efficacy are evolved core components of the UT Dallas Freshman Mentor Program, all of which maximize its outreach scope and ability to self-sustain. A positive academic correlation for students engaged as both freshmen and mentors, high retention rates within the program, and positive participant feedback are reflected in assessment measures for a program that feels both highly-personalized and firmly established in the current campus culture.

Presenter(s): Felipe Martinez, Executive Director, CIRCLE, University of Washington; Megan Kennedy, Manager, Strategic Initiatives for Student Wellness, University of Washington; Sean Ferris, Manager of Student Success, University of Washington

When students leave without earning a degree, institutions rarely engage in self-reflection to understand their role in the students’ departure. As a result, students bear the blame and impact of their decision, leaving no room for institutional action or accountability. This session will highlight work at the University of Washington analyzing the reasons why students leave without their degree. Presenters will highlight how the data collected is shaping process improvements and a continuum of care at the university.

In reporting processes, student affairs professionals are required to demonstrate, with evidence, the effectiveness of their programs and services. How do we ensure that these reports are valuable and impactful? Ideally, a data informed report should provide institutionally aligned accomplishments with a narrative that’s designed to inform all stakeholders, rather than a document created only to meet a deadline. Presenter(s): Fabiola Mora, Director, Academic Advancement Center, Colorado State University; Jill Putman, College Coordinator for Student Success, Colorado State University; Miel McCarthy, Assistant Director, First-generation and Foundation Scholarships, Colorado State University

Research supports the benefits of shifting to asset-based approaches when serving first-generation students, but current practices often approach this work through a deficit-based lens. Shifting to an asset-based framework requires practitioners to acknowledge, recognize, and understand the unique experiences students bring into their institutions and how those experiences add value to their educational journeys. Student affairs practitioners’ understanding of these frameworks and how to apply them is crucial to the success of first-generation students on college campuses and to shifting the first-generation student narrative. This presentation will provide an overview of asset-based frameworks grounded in research and theory. Presenters will also share lessons learned, tools, and strategies to shift to asset-based approaches, case study discussions.

The Unconquered Scholars Program (USP) provides qualified Florida State University students guidance, continual mentor-ship, advocacy, security, and a voice to further ensure their personal academic success and long-term independence. The Unconquered Scholars Program provides an array of support services promoting overall success to youth who experienced foster care, homelessness, relative care, or ward of the State status. Many of the program participants (Scholars) have faced profound hardships during childhood that increase their risk of leaving academia without a degree. The presenter in this session will discuss strategies for improving persistence and completion through this unique program.

This session introduces data analytics as an essential decision-making tool, focusing on areas comprising admissions and enrollment management. The presenters will discuss the rise and significance of data analytics, and will explore emerging business models emanating from these processes, before unpacking several practical considerations germane to using data analytics in strategic enrollment management. Finally, this session will emphasize the importance of transforming institutional cultures to support the adoption of data analytics in higher education decision-making.

An increasing number of first-generation students are continuing or restarting their educational journey into graduate school. With this growth, institutions are seeking resources to expand services tailored for first-generation graduate students. In this session, professionals will be encouraged to abandon the deficit model of first-generation support and move towards an empowering approach to services. The discussion will explore programming involving the collaboration of campus partners, faculty and students.

Practical, Sensible, and Actionable: Harnessing the Power of Data to Guide our Most Important Decisions

Presenter(s): Tim Bono, Assistant Dean for Assessment and Analytics in the Division of Student Affairs, Washington University

Leaders in higher education are charged with developing high-quality programs that will satisfy both the complex needs of our students as well as the considerable expectations of our stakeholders. This presentation will illustrate how data can position us for astute decision-making as we allocate resources toward our most important priorities and as we negotiate our most pressing concerns. In particular, attention will be given to the mental health crisis—rated recently by college presidents and student affairs leaders overwhelmingly as their #1 top student concern—and data-informed interventions that can promote student well-being.

A Multi-method Longitudinal Study of First-generation College Students

Presenter(s): Anne McDaniel, Executive Director, Center for the Study of Student Life, The Ohio State University

This program will share original research from the first year of a longitudinal, mixed methods study of first-generation college students. The presenter will share preliminary results from a study of combining surveys of incoming first-year, first-generation students and interviews with almost 100 students at a large, public research university. It will consider students’ expectations for college, experiences with transition to college and explore how to better support these students. The session will conclude with a discussion of how the findings can be translated into practice to help support first generation college students.

Advisor as a Navigator: First-generation Study Abroad

Presenter(s): Angie Klimko, Director, TRIO Student Support Services, Washington State University

This session will explore the challenges and successes of creating a first-generation study abroad program. The WSU 1st Gen Abroad program is unique in that traveling advisors actively engage with first-generation students throughout the entire process to overcome the barriers that prevent many first-generation students from participating in study abroad opportunities. This program provides an affordable, life-changing experience with extraordinary academic and professional development opportunities. Tools to create your own program will be provided and discussed in this session.
BLACK MALES’ DREAMS AND NIGHTMARES OF BEING A FIRST-GENERATION COLLEGE STUDENT

Presenter(s): Tevin Byers, Academic Advisor, University of Florida

First-generation college students often face challenges concerning social identity, financial literacy, and educational standing. These obstacles compromise academic success when compared to non-first-generation college students. This session explores these different challenges and provide attendees an awareness of the Black male first-generation college student perspective. Significant portion of the session will include discussion of the impact current events and culture has on Black male perception.

BUILDING OUT PEER MENTORING PROGRAMS WITH CAS STANDARDS

Presenter(s): Jennifer Lowman, Director, Student Persistence Research, University of Nevada, Reno; Lisa Maletsky, Coordinator, Student Persistence Research, University of Nevada, Reno; Desiree Acosta, Program Coordinator, Nevada First in the Pack, University of Nevada, Reno; Saundra Mitrovich, Outreach and Retention Coordinator, University of Nevada, Reno; Loni Romo, Graduate Intern, PAW Program Specialist, University of Nevada, Reno

In this session, two approaches to building peer mentoring programs are compared and contrasted highlighting different ways to integrate the CAS standards in assessment and development. Nevada First in the Pack was designed as a first-generation student support program that added peer mentoring, while PAW (Peers-at-Work) was designed as a peer mentoring program from conception. Presenters will discuss challenges faced by both programs at different points of development regarding peer mentoring and how the challenges reveal how conceptual and methodological problems, like a program’s theory of change benefit from alignment to CAS standards.
Dissolving Divisions: Engaging First-generation Students First through Collaborative Initiatives and Programming

Presenter(s): Daniel Bureau, Assistant Vice President for Student Affairs, University of Memphis; Jacki Rodriguez, Program Coordinator, University of Memphis; Sally Gates, Associate Dean, Student Leadership and Involvement, University of Memphis

Campuses across the nation are taking a closer look at their first-generation student population. As more and more first-generation families are coming to campus, there is increased demand for research, training, resources and programming targeted specifically for first-generation students. With this new focus on fulfilling the unique needs of our first-generation students, campuses are also finding new ways to help serve this growing population. Recently, the University of Memphis developed a collaborative initiative focused on bringing together all research, divisions and first-generation programs and support services into one collaborative approach. Through this process, the goal has been to streamline these services to better meet the needs of first-generation students and their families. This program highlights the different first-generation programs and services at the UoM and how services have been aligned to help develop a campus-wide first-generation workgroup.

Examining First-generation Students of Color & Disenfranchised Grief: Tools for Student Affairs Practitioners

Presenter(s): Jessica Thompson, Student Services Adviser, University of Minnesota, Twin Cities; Tabatha Cruz, Graduate Research Assistant, University of Minnesota, Twin Cities; Michael Stebleton, Associate Professor, College of Education and Human Development,

First-generation Students of Color (FGSOC) receive utopian messages about college. These idealistic images fail to capture the gains and losses many FGSOC face at predominantly White institutions (PWI). Inquiries on loss focus on death experiences, and non-death experiences are rarely explored in student affairs. Negative experiences can trigger disenfranchised grief and can influence well-being and academic success. In this session, participants will utilize reflective exercises and case studies to engage in discussions aimed at best supporting FGSOC.

FirstGen & FGSS

Presenter(s): Miel McCarthy, Assistant Director, First-generation and Foundation Scholarships, Colorado State University; Jill Putman, College Coordinator for Student Success, Colorado State University; Fabiola Mora, Director of the Academic Advancement Center TRIO SSS, Colorado State University

This session will situate the first-generation student experience at the intersection of identity with the purpose of discussing the importance of serving students in a holistic manner in order to really support their success and reach institutional goals of closing achievement gaps. The session will include discussion on intersectionality and an overview of programs/initiatives at Colorado State University that have yielded positive student success outcomes by focusing on first generation students with multiple marginalized or underrepresented identities.

Fostering an Institutional Culture of Holistic Success for First-generation College Students

Presenter(s): Talisha Adams, Assistant Director, Student Success Center, University of Tennessee, Knoxville

Students who are first in their family to attend college are becoming more prevalent on college campuses. This session will highlight the successes and challenges of a comprehensive program for first-generation college students. First-generation college students have the opportunity to be successful on college campuses through intentional cross-campus partnerships, financial assistance, targeted support programs, and positive social norms. This interactive session focuses on the increasingly critical relationships between academic support services and institutional partners in supporting and celebrating first-generation students.

Gamifying Success: Enhancing the Student Transition through Technology, Community Building, and Reflection

Presenter(s): Tyler Guenette, Assistant Director, Student Success, University of Michigan-Dearborn; Saulo Ortiz, Success Coach, Opportunity Scholars Program, University of Michigan-Dearborn

After recognizing a persistent first-year retention gap of 5+% and graduation gap of 12% between a scholarship cohort of students from under-resourced schools compared to their peers, it was clear money alone was not enough. With an innovative, low-cost, approach now in its 3rd year, the scholarship cohort has closed the retention gap, and are outperforming their campus peers. Come explore the presenters’ adaptable, gamified approach, which blends research-proven practices with a point system utilizing the campus’ learning management system.

It Takes Two Villages: Supporting Transfer from Community Colleges to Selective Institutions
Presenter(s): Allison Morgan, Program Manager, Cleveland Humanities Collaborative, Case Western Reserve University; Abigail Dohanos, Associate Dean, Liberal Arts, Cuyahoga Community College; Melissa Swafford, Manager, Transfer Center, Cuyahoga Community College

The Cleveland Humanities Collaborative (CHC) provides an example of how two- and four-year institutions can work together to create transfer pathways that reduce the gap in high-achieving community college students who attend selective institutions. Attendees will leave with a blueprint for cultivating relationships at their own two- and four-year partner institutions, along with a guide of best practices for supporting students in transfer pathways. The presenters will close with a discussion of case studies based on current CHC students.

Summer Scholars: A Gateway, Not a Bridge
Presenter(s): Daphne Rankin, Associate Vice Provost, Strategic Enrollment Management, Virginia Commonwealth University

Research shows that first-generation students who develop academic confidence, social capital, and have family support are more likely to be successful. VCU has worked with stakeholders from across the university to develop Summer Scholars, a summer program for incoming first-generation students. The program provides students the opportunity to get a head start on their path to graduation by earning course credits, and building community before the start of their first semester on campus.

The Reverse Domino Effect: Shifting the Trajectory for Students Impacted by Trauma
Presenter(s): Pamela Larde, Associate Professor of Research and Higher Education, Mercer University; Everett Tolbert, Licensed Professional Counselor,

This session highlights the success strategies of first-generation students who experienced trauma prior to entering college. It uncovers an apparent pattern to success referred to as the reverse domino effect. This pattern can dramatically change the trajectory of a student who has experienced trauma and hardship in the years leading to college. Implications include offering opportunities that go beyond goal attainment, academic success, and overcoming difficult situations, but that also address the core elements of belief, self-determination, and post-traumatic growth.

The Path to Adulting: Coaching our Students to Accept Responsibility & Create Self-Acceptance
Presenter(s): Blaire Tinker, Program Manager, Student Support and Development, University of Michigan Ann Arbor

Many faculty and staff maintain a systematic approach to student support that involves asking open-ended questions and making yourself available and accessible. Students are often times navigating complex systems, and a cookie-cutter approach to student support will not yield far-reaching results and the manufacturing of transferable competencies that will lead to high achieving, consistent success. During this session, participants will learn to implement a mentoring/coaching process that emphasizes a need for students to accept personal responsibility and gain self-awareness.

Presenter(s): Antoinette Curl, Director, Academic Advising, Texas A&M University-San Antonio; Kimberley Nanez, Director, Student Academic Success Center, Texas A&M University-San Antonio

Trying to connect Dreamers or first-generation students to career development? Texas A&M University-San Antonio launched the DREAM Mentor Program to help Dreamers identify majors, careers, and professional pathways. Using a peer mentoring model, the program cultivates self-efficacy, reflection, and professional communication and builds community among Dreamers. Participants in this session will learn how to develop a peer mentoring program, including concerns specific to Dreamers, and will leave with an action plan for implementation on their own campuses.

Why Subpopulations Matter: Being an Advocate for “Invisible” Students

Presenter(s): Cory Rusin, Student Success Coordinator, Binghamton University; Erin Marulli, Assistant Director, Broome County HEARS, Binghamton University

This session will introduce a collaborative initiative occurring at a mid-sized, public, research university and a community college to determine the needs of pregnant and/or parenting students. The presenter will discuss the importance of providing support to small subpopulations of students to ensure equal access to daily student activities and high impact learning opportunities. The presenter will also examine the process of gaining support for initiatives that do not initially represent key investments for an institution in order to ensure equal access for “invisible” student populations. Preliminary results and strategies for assisting pregnant and/or parenting students will be shared.

You’ve Been Thinking About Credit All Wrong

Presenter(s): Phil Schuman, Director, Financial Literacy, Indiana University

We receive more questions about the topic of credit compared to any other. The questions often reflect a lack of knowledge on credit, focusing on quick fixes rather than building solid financial habits that will translate to improved credit. The presentation will not conclude that credit itself or credit-related companies are bad, but rather that for each of us to be better at managing our finances we must evaluate our situations independently. Each participant will walk away understanding how they can evaluate their finances without a credit score and how they can better educate their students on healthy financial habits.

Assessment is one of the most critical features of developing and sustaining successful first-generation programs and initiatives. Identifying first-generation college students and their needs as well as documenting and highlighting effective practice is the key to continued institutional support and program sustainability. This session will explore the role of assessment in evaluating first-generation student needs, interaction with programs and services, and learning outcomes. It will also outline a model to organize these assessment activities and discuss strategies for conducting meaningful assessment of both student development and programmatic effectiveness. Session participants will have the opportunity to reflect on the assessment climate on their own campuses and share successful techniques and methods from their own experience.

As a growing student population, first-generation college students bring unique strengths, as well as diverse, valuable knowledge and experiences to their college environments. This session will examine the Student Success Coaching program at the University of California, San Diego and its efforts to coach its large cohort of first-generation college students through scalable support initiatives. During this session, participants will learn about these support initiatives and will have the opportunity to reflect, brainstorm, and discuss ways to enhance support for students at their own institution.

Cultivating Impact at Scale Through First-generation Peer Mentors

Presenter(s): Christina Hernandez, Coordinator, ENGR Academic and Student Affairs, Arizona State University; Jesus Chavez, Coordinator, ENGR Academic and Student Affairs, Arizona State University; Nicole Herrera, Academic Success Specialist, Arizona State University

The Engineering Futures program of Arizona State University offers first-generation students a collaborative network of peers, industry representatives, alumni, staff and faculty to help champion their success and support their intersectional identity development as engineers. In this session, attendees will learn how better equipping peer mentors will enable them to leverage their identity development to be reciprocated in the form of their mentees’ success. Attendees will learn about findings from this innovative mentor approach and consider opportunities to assess their own programs.

Developing Affinity Spaces for Students of Color at Small Private Colleges

Presenter(s): Jasmin Robinson, Director, Diversity and Inclusion Programs, Elmhurst College

Research suggest that having dedicated spaces for students of color is imperative to their social and emotional well-being. The Office of Diversity and Inclusion at Elmhurst College developed two empowerment groups to support Latinx and African American student populations. This session aims to identify the opportunities and challenges with developing and sustaining affinity spaces at predominately white small private colleges. The audience will engage in small group discussion to determine best practices for creating groups at their respective institutions.

Enhancing Your Student Success Toolkit: Co-Curricular Learning and On-Campus Employment

Presenter(s): Amelia Parnell, Vice President for Research and Policy, NASPA; Omari Burnside, Assistant Vice President for Strategy and Practice, NASPA

Institutions continue to make great strides in leveraging evidence-based practices to support their student success agenda. NASPA remains committed to promoting these practices and highlighting campuses that are spurring innovation and seeing progress towards their goals. In this session, NASPA will present two emerging student success practices that can help students acquire and capture career-ready skills, experiences, and competencies, as well as, potentially set new standards for the field – co-curricular learning and on-campus student employment. Presenters will discuss NASPA's latest research in these areas, highlight national trends, and uncover why and how several institutions are using these practices in their student success toolkit.

First-generation Narratives in Comics

Presenter(s): La’Tonya Rease Miles, Director, First Year Experience, University of California, Los Angeles; Martha Enciso, Associate Director, Weber Honors College, San Diego State University

In this session, presenters turn to popular culture, specifically superhero comics, as a vehicle for exploring first-generation college identity and narratives. How can we use comics and, by extension, popular culture more generally as a tool to learn about first-generation student characteristics? The presenters will highlight an interdisciplinary approach in order to explore the complexity of the first-gen identity and also to push the boundaries of current discourse beyond psychosocial and educational frameworks.

Leveraging Homegrown Financial Strategies to Retain More Students

Presenter(s): Jared Tippets, Vice President for Student Affairs, Southern Utah University; Eric Kirby, Assistant Vice President, Student Affairs, Southern Utah University; Ashleigh Zimmerman, Coordinator, Financial Literacy and Completion, Southern Utah University

With the costs of higher education rising dramatically, financial struggles are one of the main reasons students fail to retain. How can institutions support students during financial struggles and help them develop the knowledge and skills to become financially savvy adults? Presenters will share the experience of Southern Utah University’s integration of strategies such as financial counseling, step-down scholarships, calling campaigns, and campus-wide outreach to normalize conversation and action around financial wellness to increase retention in 9% in three years.

Portland’s Pilots: How the UP First-generation Peer Mentor Program Helps First-Year Students Navigate and Maneuver College Life

Presenter(s): Matt Daily, Assistant Director, Shepard Academic Resource Center, University of Portland

Research offers that First-generation students can build self-efficacy and achievement via competent, relatable peer role models that draw from personal experiences (Jacobi, 1991). First-gen peer mentor programs are common across the country, but best practices in running effective First-gen peer mentorship programs are still early in development. Presenters will explore all aspects of a peer mentor program from recruitment of mentors/mentees, training, curriculum design, execution of topics specific to the First-gen experience, and collaborations with other on-campus units.

Reach Back, Pull Forward: Mentoring the Next Generation of Minority Leaders

Presenter(s): Laquala Coleman, Dean of Students, Jackson State University

Mentoring is a critical component for minority students to feel integrated on a college campus. The aim of this session is to provide participants with information on mentoring underrepresented student populations and equip participants with the skills and knowledge to act as effective mentors. Effective mentor relationships contribute to improving underrepresented students’ sense of belonging, which in turn can improve measurements of persistence, completion, and even career readiness.

Retention and Well-being: An Overlooked Relationship

Presenter(s): Nathaan Demers, Vice President, and Director, Clinical Programs, Grit Digital Health

Getting health and wellness on students’ to-do list is more important than ever. Institutions reporting issues such as anxiety, depression, and loneliness as top contributing factors to challenges with persistence and thoughtful attention must be devoted to these topics. The presentation provides a case study of YOU@CSU, a digital platform increasing health literacy, help seeking behaviors, and connection to campus resources at Colorado State University to promote well-being, increase retention, and inform student success initiatives through data analytics.

Streamlining the Process: Connecting Student Experiences through Shared Data Resources
Presenter(s): Chris Tankersley, Associate Director, Student Learning and Assessment, Kent State University

Residence Services at Kent State identified duplicate efforts across campus involving student outreach and interventions. Accordingly, a process was initiated to streamline and capture student connections and the impact of RA interactions. This resulted in a system to capture RA’s one-on-one interactions with students, student participation in campus activities, and flags related to academic challenges. This session will share the presenters’ journey and offer tips for identifying, innovating, and acting upon similar opportunities on your campus between student and academic affairs.

Presenter(s): Alan Bearman, Dean, University Libraries and the Center for Student Success and Retention, Washburn University; James Barraclough, Director, Undergraduate Initiatives, Washburn University; Christina Foreman, Navigate Administrator, Student Success Evaluation and Retention Specialist, Washburn University

The presenters will examine the three replicable steps Open Access Washburn University took to build their data analytics program, upon which its student success initiatives were built. These initiatives led to a 12% increase in First-year student retention over the last four years. Institutional self examination, building institutional capacity, and the creation of an action plan focused on increasing access and student completion of all students, with particular focus upon those from underrepresented groups.

The Hero’s Journey: A Positive Lens for the Transition to College
Presenter(s): Jennifer Schoen, Director, Opportunity Scholarships and Outreach Programs, Northeastern University; Lauren Boudreaux, Student, Northeastern University; Tyreke Gaston, Student, Northeastern University

The Hero’s Journey is a framework that is seen every day in the stories of students’ lives. It resonates across cultures and belief systems as a positive model of growth for first-generation students. The framework views students at the center of their own journey in college, containing themes of transformation, accepting support from others, overcoming adversity, and finding success. Presenters in this session will show how sharing this framework with students is empowering and motivational in this interactive and discussion-filled presentation.

Alumni Matter: Creating a Culture of First-generation Graduates Giving Back
Presenter(s): Erica Aguiar, Assistant Director, First-generation Student Success, University of Florida; Leslie Pendleton, Senior Director, Retention and Success Initiatives, University of Florida

Creating institutional support for first-generation students is crucial. At the University of Florida, alumni are part of this support team: they volunteer their time and talent through featured alumni talks, admissions events, and career fairs. How do you create this commitment while students are on campus? This presentation will discuss University of Florida’s successful alumni engagement tactics and how the institution moved from engaging first-generation students as undergraduates to engaging them as lifelong members of the institutional fabric.

An Inclusive Model of Coaching Amid Organizational Change
Presenter(s): Mike Embry, Associate Vice President, Partner Success, InsideTrack; Elizabeth Rainey, Director, Pan-American Life Student Success Center, Loyola University New Orleans

In summer 2017, amid organizational restructuring, Loyola University New Orleans introduced a success coaching program for every first-year student. Despite challenges, retention improved an astonishing 5% in one year. What does it mean to offer an intervention to every first year, rather than a targeted group? Loyola’s approach is consistent with its commitment to access, inclusivity, and success. Participants will learn how to design a coaching program and the challenges and opportunities that arise as organizations and programs evolve.

Building Assessment Capacity Division-Wide
Presenter(s): Kerry Klima, Assistant Director, Assessment and Evaluation, California State University, Long Beach; John Hamilton, Assistant Vice President, University Access and Retention, California State University, Long Beach

Research indicates building a culture of assessment in a division of student affairs is vital to demonstrate the ability to contribute to the institutional outcomes, goals, mission, and commitment to accountability. Building a culture is also complex, and is often lead by the division of student affairs assessment specialist, however, it is vital that assessment is conducted by all staff. This session will include discussions and information on building capacity and culture for assessment through engaging all staff from senior leadership to entry-level professionals; all through an access and retention integrated approach to student affairs assessment, grounded in Watson Swail’s geometric retention model.

Creating a Culture of Care: Supporting First-generation Students

Presenter(s): Dionicia Mahler-Rogers, Associate Director for Student Activities & Leadership, Old Dominion University; Don Stansberry, Dean of Students and Associate Vice President, Student Engagement, Old Dominion University

As leaders, we must be “student ready” and willing to create an intersection of services that support student success, from addressing issues like food insecurity or homelessness, to providing coaching support. Being “student ready” means supporting students throughout the student life cycle, which begins at the first point of contact and continues through graduation and beyond. In this session, presenters will share how creating a culture of care has positively impacted student retention and success for our first-generation students.

First Step to First-gen Success: Know Your Students

Presenter(s): Annemieke Rice, Vice President, Campus Success, Campus Labs; Sonja Ardoin, Assistant Professor, Student Affairs Administration Program, Appalachian State University

Each year, first-generation college students take a leap into the world of higher education, representing between 22% and 77% of a campus population. But, do institutions really know who are the first-generation college students on their campuses and what they may need from them? Presenters in this session will discuss the pros and cons of different first-generation student definitions, explore first-generation student data collection from two research projects, and create an actionable plan for institutions to know and serve first-generation college students better.

Oftentimes, the approach to help with the success of first-generation students is to develop new programs. To ensure long-term sustainable outcomes, institutions of higher learning must take a strategic institutional shift. This effort requires organizational leaders to keep the needs and experiences of these students as central to the student success agenda. During this session, a panel of institutional leaders with over twenty-five years of experience working with this population share formal and informal strategies used to promote student success.

Presenter(s): Joseph Ginese, New and First Year Student Programs Manager, CUNY-Borough of Manhattan Community College; Rahana Belle-Jerome, New and First Year Student Programs Coordinator, CUNY-Borough of Manhattan Community College

With over 150 countries represented, and more than half of the student body self-identifying as first-gen, Borough of Manhattan Community College saw an opportunity to assist students whose hardships started before they arrived on campus. Learn how to build an intervention-style coaching/partnership program that assists first-generation college students through the challenges and obstacles. Presenters built such a program that resulted in an over 80% student retention rate at one of the largest CUNY institutions.

Student Success Programs Community Think Tank: Expanding Programmatic Services with Limited Budgets

Presenter(s): Chimene Boone, Director, TRIO Student Support Services Program, Virginia Commonwealth University; Michelle Bair, TRIO Program Advisor, Virginia Commonwealth University

For first-generation and low-income students, creating a welcoming and meaningful community is at the core of institutional retention. The creation of effective student success and community building programming can increase expenses for institutions. The utilization of on-campus and community partnerships allow programs serving first-generation and low-income students to provide effective services with a limited budget. This session will explore ways that civic engagement and campus partnerships can substantially affect first-generation and low-income students’ retention and future career success.

Within Our Own Communities: Strategies for Hosting a First-generation Student Success Conference
Presenter(s): La’Tonya Rease Miles, Director, First Year Experience and Strategic Initiatives, University of California, Los Angeles; Jessica Thompson, Student Services Adviser, University of Minnesota; Sonja Montas-Hunter, Assistant Vice Provost, Student Access and Success, Florida International University; Melissa Westover, Lecturer, First Year Experience, Northern Arizona University
Moderator: Brett Bruner, Dean of Student Engagement, Arkansas Tech University

As understanding and improving the experiences and outcomes of first-generation students gains momentum across the country, institutions are taking leadership in establishing outlets for professional development and networking within their own communities. Through this panel, leaders from the University of California system, Florida International University, the University of Minnesota, and Northern Arizona University will discuss their experiences in establishing regional first-generation student success conferences. Panelists will discuss gaining institutional support, planning processes, and lessons learned. Participants will gain insights into establishing an event within their own communities.

Centering the Voices of Low-income, First-generation Students of Color to Challenge Dominant Cultural Practices in Higher Education
Presenter(s): Rebecca Covarrubias, Associate Professor of Psychology and Faculty Director of the Student Success Equity Research Center, University of California, Santa Cruz

American classrooms reflect culture-specific ideas about the “right” way to be a student; specifically, they reward soft independence, such as self-expression and self-motivation. For students who are also guided by norms and practices of interdependence, such as low-income, first-generation students of color, the American educational institution is likely to be experienced as a “mismatch” or as a context that largely renders their culture invisible. This cultural mismatch is particularly prevalent during the transition to college. In this talk, I examine how privileging soft independence ignores the familial commitments of low-income, first-generation students of color and other ways of enacting independence and, subsequently, undermines well-being and performance. Drawing on findings from an interactive conversation with first-year, low-income, first-generation students of color, I then facilitate a discussion about inclusive practices that better reflect and serve their values, intersecting identities, needs and strengths. That is, how can we, as institutional stakeholders, support the cultural growth and holistic success of our students as they navigate college? This research work calls for a need to address the role that existing dominant cultural norms and practices in higher education play in contributing to educational disparities, and the need to reframe these practices in ways that center the strengths and experiences of a fast-growing population of students.

Building a Strong Foundation: Using Professional Development to Foster a Culture of Intentional Assessment

Presenter(s): Andrea Pope, Student Affairs Assessment Consultant, James Madison University

Assessment, when engaged in intentionally, supports the development of programs that meaningfully impact students’ lives. Unfortunately, student affairs professionals often feel unequipped to engage in this type of intentional assessment due to a lack of knowledge and/or skill. In this session, we describe how the Center for Assessment at James Madison University partnered with the Division of Student Affairs and the College Student Personnel master’s program to address this obstacle through the development of a three-day, hands-on introductory assessment workshop. Recommendations will be given for how this program might be adapted to address the unique needs/constraints of other institutions.

Presenter(s): Tracy Newton, Executive Director, Student Success, Brooklyn College, CUNY; Estefania Ponti, Assistant Director, Advising Assessment and Student Success, Brooklyn College, CUNY

In this session, presenters will discuss how the City University of New York’s Brooklyn College campus implemented a centralized academic momentum initiative in spite of stagnant budgets, limited staff, and changes in administrative positions. By employing innovative thinking, administrators worked to align goals and funds to build support services and technological systems. After a discussion of implementation and assessment, presenters will lead an activity to identify academic momentum difficulties and develop solutions on participants’ campuses.

Designing Effective Models for Student Intervention in STEM

Presenter(s): Blakeley Calhoun, Assistant Director, Undergraduate Success, University of Virginia; Danielle Dyer, Program Director, Clark Scholars Program, University of Virginia

This session will overview components of successful student intervention models for a STEM context, including their culture, goals, recommended team members, and assessment. This session is unique in that it precedes general ideas for intervention (e.g., additional tutor support, increasing access to mentorship, targeted advising for students labeled at risk, etc.) to provide session attendees with best practices to develop a structurally sound intervention model.
Elevate Your Student Success Efforts with Non-Cognitive Assessments
Presenter(s): Joanne Goldwater, Associate Dean, Retention and Student Success, St. Mary's College of Maryland; Annemieke Rice, Vice President, Campus Success, Campus Labs

There has been a great deal of research in recent years regarding the link between non-cognitive skills and positive student outcomes in higher education. But what exactly are non-cognitive skills and what role could they play in supporting student success? In this session, St. Mary’s College of Maryland will share its use of non-cognitive assessments to better understand the strengths students are bringing with them to campus, and how they are using this information to impact individual student success.

Engaging First Year Students through Early Arrival Programs
Presenter(s): Daniel McDevitt, Director, Office of Student Success, Saint Joseph’s University; Natalie Walker Brown, Director, Inclusion and Diversity Achievement, Saint Joseph’s University; Emily Forte, Assistant Director of Student Success, Saint Joseph’s University

A successful transition to college starts before the first class of the semester even begins. In this session, attendees will learn about one institution’s use of Early Arrival Programs to improve student sense of community among members of their incoming class and increase first year to second year retention. Higher education theory, doctoral research, best practices, lessons learned, and real-life stories will all be shared during this informative and engaging session.

Financial Wellness Center: A Coaching Model Within the Business Office
Presenter(s): Amanda Nguyen, Director, Student Financial Services, and Interim Director, Financial Aid, Portland State University; Shawna Chambers, Assistant Director, Financial Wellness Center, Portland State University

Beginning in 2010, Student Financial Services at Portland State University began implementing strategic changes to promote financial transparency and education to the students. Presenters will share the small and large projects leading up to the establishment of the Financial Wellness Center within Student Financial Services. Along the way, presenters will touch on how buy-in was created across campus, the outcomes, how the Financial Wellness Center works, the comprehensive training components created for developmental coaching and coaching to completion, key performance indicators, and goals for the coming years.

Presenter(s): Tori Rehr, Research Analyst, The Ohio State University; Benjamin Raines, Financial Education Program Coordinator, The Ohio State University

The Scarlet and Grey Financial (SGF) coaching program at Ohio State engages students in setting financial goals and increasing their financial knowledge. Presenters will share quantitative and qualitative findings from the 2017-18 post-appointment assessment. Presenters will use the assessment data to highlight program overlap between SGF and university initiatives, as well as discuss areas of curricular strength and further opportunities for growth.
Interstate Passport®: A Learning Outcomes Solution to Transfer Credit Loss

Presenter(s): Jane Sherman, Interstate Passport State Coordinator, Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education; Anna Galas, Interstate Passport Program Manager, Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education

Interstate Passport promotes student success by preventing loss of credit in the transfer process. Passport earners transfer their completed general education block to any other network institution, based on high quality learning outcomes not specific courses and number of credits. It is the only nationwide program smoothing transfer for students across state lines and can also help resolve in-state transfer. It has special relevance for military students and veterans, and for low-income students, who more often begin at two-year colleges.

Learning for Life (L4L) is a network of programs and college partnerships designed to link students to a wide range of resources, services, and opportunities for college success. Bridging the gap to support students in doing well. At the heart of L4L is the Navigator Model. Presenters will share how through this model, L4L provides comprehensive services through a network of student Navigators who are trained to link students to resources to support retention.

Leverage Technology to Improve Student Success and Enhance Parent Engagement

Presenter(s): Tess Gibson, Program Administrator, Parent and Family Programs, Auburn University; Leslie Gale, Customer Support Specialist, CampusESP

In 2017, Auburn University undertook an innovative initiative to meet student success goals through parent engagement. Parent and Family Programs deployed a parent portal technology, in partnership with campus colleagues, to communicate with over 19,500 family members. The portal connects parents to their students’ data, facilitating appropriate assistance and boosting student persistence. This session highlights successes, challenges, and shares tips on developing a comprehensive parent engagement plan as a part of student success initiatives.

Perceptions about Math Placement Among First-generation Students, Low-Income Students, and Students of Color

Presenter(s): Gaye DiGregorio, Executive Director, Collaborative for Student Achievement, Colorado State University

This research explores first-generation, low-income, students’ of color experiences with pre-calculus/calculus courses, focusing on their self-belief in being successful in math. The math placement revealed anxiety with this high stakes exam, and did not enhance self-belief. Experiences that positively influenced self-belief focused on students’ transformation as engaged learners, instructors’ integration of inclusive pedagogies, and supplemental support structures. A community approach to learning may enhance students’ self-belief in math.

Presenter(s): Tadarrayl Starke, Director, Center for Academic Retention and Enhancement (CARE), Florida State University; Justina Jones, Associate Director, Center for Academic Retention and Enhancement (CARE), Florida State University

Florida State University’s Center for Academic Retention and Enhancement (CARE) promotes retention and graduation of students traditionally underrepresented in higher education, with an emphasis on first-generation students. CARE provides support services to over 1,600 students through a comprehensive system of programming and resources. This model of student support helped CARE realize an average 95% first-year retention and 77% six-year graduation rate since 2007. Moderator: Sonja Ardoin, Assistant Professor, Student Affairs Administration Program, Appalachian State University

Presenter(s): Linsey Hugo, Director, Employer Relations, Ohio University

A groundbreaking study shows the power and potential of machine learning to predict and influence employment at graduation. As universities are increasingly held accountable for career outcomes, institutions need to understand which students are more likely to be employed upon graduation and why. The purpose of this study was to determine to what extent undergraduate student employability signals – such as major, GPA, co-curricular activities, and internships – can predict if a student secures full-time employment prior to graduation. This research uses commonly recognized and advanced machine learning models. Results demonstrate that employment prior to graduation can be predicted with 87% accuracy.

Validation Among First-generation Undergraduates in Learning Communities

Moderator: Sonja Ardoin, Assistant Professor, Student Affairs Administration Program, Appalachian State University

Presenter(s): Carolina Ramirez, Doctoral Candidate, University of California, Davis

This paper shares findings from a larger dissertation study which examines how first-generation undergraduates at a broad-access four-year university experience academic and interpersonal validation (Rendon, 1997) within a cohort learning community. Although their role is not often considered, student affairs professionals are well positioned to act as “facilitators of student learning” (Ribera, Fernandez, & Gray, 2012). Finding highlight ways student affairs professionals, in addition to faculty, connect participants with academic resources, provide academic advisement, and otherwise validate participants academically. This study uses purposeful sampling and narrative analysis (Creswell, 2007). Participants are: (1) freshmen at a broad-access baccalaureate (2) first-generation, (3) placed into developmental education, and (4) participants in a cohort learning community.

Anticipatory Socialization: Leveraging Institutional Partnerships in Support of First-generation Transfer Students
Presenter(s): Fai Howard, Assistant Dean, Upper-Level Initiatives, University of South Florida | Peninsula 1               |

Creating an annual report can be challenging in a hierarchical structure where you must demonstrate effectiveness at the program, department, division, and institution levels. Assessment coordinators often find themselves tasked with creating one comprehensive report including all the various programs that integrates department and institutional outcomes. The presenters will explore the challenges of assessment collaboration and how they are working to build capacity and cohesion within their unit.

This session will focus on first-generation college students who complete an associate of arts degree (A.A.) at a two-year college and subsequently transfer to a four-year institution. The Fuse Transfer program at the University of South Florida embodies organizational assimilation and social support to shape the needs of first-generation transfer students, while utilizing key components of effective transfer partnerships to address structural and process challenges often absent from the conversation. Presenters in this session will share program details for duplication and implementation at other institutions.

Collaborating with Institutional Effectiveness Offices: Strategies and Lessons Learned
Presenter(s): Annemieke Rice, Vice President, Campus Success, Campus Labs; Gavin Henning, Professor, Higher Education, and Program Director, Higher Education Programs, New England College; Jennifer Wells, Director, Assessment and Assistant Professor of Higher Education, Kennesaw State University

As a student affairs assessment professional, you’re likely knowledgeable (and passionate) about the field of student affairs and savvy about assessment practices – with those skills combined, you are a powerful player in your division! But what about working within the broader construct of Institutional Effectiveness? The presenters will break down what you need to know and do to be successful collaborating with your IE and academic affairs colleagues to drive meaningful assessment practice across your institution.

Financial Wellness on the Margins: Examining Financial Behaviors and Attitudes of Understudied Groups
Presenter(s): Tori Rehr, Research Analyst, The Ohio State University; Erica Phillips, Associate Director, Center for the Study of Student Life, The Ohio State University; Anne McDaniel, Executive Director, Center for the Study of Student Life, The Ohio State University; Catherine Montalto, Director of First Year Experience, The Ohio State University

Presenters in this program will highlight findings from the 2017 multi-institutional Study on Collegiate Financial Wellness, centered on understudied marginalized groups. A brief overview of financial wellness and techniques for studying DACA students, transgender students, and multiracial students will be presented, followed by a discussion of innovative ways to translate research into practice to help these students maximize their financial wellness.

CTAG
Finding the Magic Number: Using Involvement Data to Uncover Key Indicators for Student Retention
Presenter(s): Vince Miller, Vice President for Student Affairs, Valdosta State University; John Wright, Associate Director, Student Life, Valdosta State University

We know that students’ involvement on campus is linked to higher rates of persistence and retention, but how involved is too involved? If you could know that precise information for your student population, what types of interventions would you design? How would your work change? In this presentation, presenters will discuss how Valdosta State University used their student involvement data to identify at what point involvement was correlated with higher rates of retention, how over-involvement correlated with lower rates of retention, the strategies they are developing to promote student success, and why every student affairs division should take the data-backed approach.
FGSS

Fostering Leadership Development in First-generation Students: Key Components to Success

Presenter(s): Natalie Hershberger, Assistant Director of Community Support and Leadership, George Washington University; Bridgette Behling, Director of Community Support and Leadership, George Washington University

This presentation will examine key issues in leadership development in first-generation students and how an intentional approach to leadership development presents the opportunity to influence student success. Presenters will propose a model of leadership development in first-generation students that practitioners can use to frame their work. The presentation will also examine how leadership development is different in first-generation students than with continuing generation students, examine barriers and offer creative solutions.

APDA

Gaining Insight Through Dynamic Predictive Modeling

Presenter(s): Heather Mechler, Director, Office of Institutional Analytics, University of New Mexico

The presenter will show how institutions can leverage immense amounts of data into simple, robust, and predictive models to better understand their students and anticipate future outcomes. In an era of increasing accountability and decreasing funds, these predictive models can serve as valuable tools for campus leaders as they allocate limited resources to serve as many students as possible. Audience members will see how dynamic predictive modeling can provide improved accuracy of information about students alongside changing circumstances.

SFWC

Higher Education and Basic Needs Literacy: A Training Experience for Academic Affairs and Student Affairs Professionals

Presenter(s): Jennifer Edwards, Professor of Communication, Tarleton State University

Presenters will facilitate an interactive session of simple ways higher education administrators, faculty, and staff can provide information and access about on-campus and community-based basic needs resources for students. Basic needs literacy categories highlighted in this presentation include the following areas of insecurity: food, clothing, housing, financial, and health. Resources for integrating basic needs knowledge in the college classroom, service learning activities, and in areas of student services will be emphasized. Participants will receive access to a higher education and basic needs community, and a list of best practices for emphasizing basic needs in higher education.

Invest in Your Library: Why Your Institution’s Librarians are a Valuable Asset in a Collaboration Portfolio
Presenter(s): Jennifer Wilhelm, Business Librarian, Texas A&M University; Alyson Vaaler, Business Librarian, Texas A&M University

Librarians are well-situated to assist students with more than simply citation management or research papers. Faculty librarians from Texas A&M University will showcase two collaborative initiatives that concentrate on important student financial situations: early college financial literacy and graduating students’ transition to the workforce. In collaboration with the University’s Money Education Center, librarians guest-lectured in financial management classes to increase freshman students’ financial management, and partnered with two Career Centers within Texas A&M to provide information and instruction on conducting an effective job search. Attendees will leave with a better understanding of ways in which departments can collaborate with librarians to support student success through financial literacy.

Leveling the Academic Playing Field: Increasing the Success Rate for First-generation Students
Presenter(s): Dariel Henry, Director, TRIO Student Support Services, Massasoit Community College

There are multiple reasons for students choosing to attend community college, including location, finances, college readiness, or career needs, and many students experience multiple challenges ranging from understanding the colloquial language used in higher education to learning various software programs. This presentation will describe how one TRIO Student Support Services Program implemented specific strategies to meet the objectives of persistence, good academic standing, graduation and retention for first-generation students who participated in a federally-funded academic support program.

Triple Threat: Closing Achievement Gaps through Integrating Equity Oriented Programs

Presenter(s): Fabiola Mora, Director, Academic Advancement Center, Colorado State University; Taé Nosaka, Director, Community for Excellence and Key Communities, Colorado State University; Ryan Barone, Assistant Vice President for Student Success, Colorado State University

Asking equity-focused questions has helped conceptualize, assess, evaluate, and when appropriate scale programs to close achievement gaps at Colorado State University (CSU). The results of these questions and efforts have supported CSU’s progress towards becoming a college ready campus, and have aided in closing gaps for first-generation, low-income and students of color on campus. Three high impact programs at CSU are leading the university commitment to closing achievement gaps for these student populations. This presentation will provide an overview of student achievement goals, programs designed to close achievement gaps, lessons learned, collective impact of programs designed, and assessment used to measure progress towards goals. Attendees will learn about tools and strategies used to close gaps, participate in discussions, and have the opportunity to share personal stories regarding their programs.

Using Cross Campus Collaborations and Experiential Learning to Design Curriculum for First-year Underrepresented Students

Presenter(s): Nekita Tingle, Coordinator, Academic Initiatives, Auburn University; Eric Hall, Coordinator, Alabama Excellence Program, Auburn University

First year seminars were created with the intention of providing students a space to become academically and socially prepared for college. Underrepresented students greatly experience the strain of having to adjust to college life, thus, intentional programming is needed to support their matriculation through college. This session will demonstrate how the use of cross campus collaborations, specialized curriculum, and experiential learning can be utilized to create an environment that is able to welcome, support, and retain underrepresented students.

Using Institutional Data to Support Success of Minoritized Students

Presenter(s): Marjorie Dorimé-Williams, Assistant Professor, Higher Education, University of Missouri-Columbia; Michael Steven Williams, Assistant Professor, Department of Educational Leadership and Policy Analysis, University of Missouri; Amand Hardiman, Graduate Student, University of Missouri

Colleges and universities devote significant time and resources to supporting student success, but few commit appropriate effort to the systematic assessment of these initiatives. There is a clear need for improving knowledge of how linking data and institutional decision-making (e.g., intentional programmatic planning, training) can systematically improve administrative praxis to better support minoritized students’ success. Using appropriate assessment data, rather than solely relying on intuition, can significantly improve what practitioners do to support minoritized students. The presenters will provide a framework and examples to help educators understand how assessment and data contribute to minoritized student success and institutional excellence.

Machine Learning Augmented Decisions for Better Student Learning Outcomes

Presenter(s): Wladimir Nikoluk, CEO, ImmerLearn

The presentation focuses on explaining how new techniques in machine learning can be used to improve student outcomes, especially persistence. Using our work with Year Up as a case study, the presentation describes how ML models are developed and deployed, including data consolidation, model selection, testing and refinement as well as examples of insights that can emerge based on these models. The latter includes how to identify distinct groups that exist within a student population and what their needs are, how to think about risks to student persistence for individual groups and understand which interventions seem to have worked for similar students in the past. The presentation will address specifically questions about working with underserved communities and highlight how to address concerns over algorithmic bias and transparency.

#InvolvedAF: Controlling for Self-Selection Bias while Assessing Student Involvement Programs

Presenter(s): Erik Dickamore, Undergraduate Research Assistant, Utah State University

Housed within Utah State University, the Center for Student Analytics pioneers the use of prediction-based propensity score matching (PPSM) in order to analyze the relationship between student programming on campus and student success. This session examines how this approach accounts for high levels of self-selection bias in co-curricular initiatives that target highly motivated students, such as student leadership programs. Results highlight the estimated causal link between co-curricular participation and student persistence, while controlling for self-selection bias.

All Hands on Deck: How We Eliminated the Achievement Gap for Race and Gender in Math Courses

Presenter(s): Kevin Yee, Assistant Dean, Undergraduate Studies, University of South Florida; Paul Atchley, Dean, Undergraduate Studies, University of South Florida

In this session, presenters will describe how their institution's math passing rates jumped from 50% to 80% over six years, while simultaneously eliminated the five-point achievement gap in race and gender. These gains were made possible by sustained efforts involving a wide swath of the university community. Presenters will describe the changes we made across offices, and participants will leave with ideas to implement on their home campuses, including strengthened ties to faculty, informed by a model of campus culture change we’ll practice at the workshop.

Career Development and Mentorship Program for First-generation Students

Presenter(s): Joanne Garce, Senior Associate Director, Multicultural and Global Programs, New York University; Diana Mendez, Assistant Director, Graduate Student Career Development, New York University

The New York University First Class Professional Development and Career Mentorship Program is a comprehensive career exploration and mentorship program for undergraduate students who identify as first-generation college students. During this session, attendees will learn how they can engage students to develop deeper connections to their respective offices. Presenters will explore how campus partners, alumni, and employers can help to address the skills gap that many first-generation college students face in their college careers.

Creating Intentional Connections to Promote Student Success: Leveraging Data Analytics and Collaborative Partnerships

Presenter(s): Keith Robinder, Associate Dean of Students, Iowa State University; Aurelia Kollasch, Senior Research Analyst, Iowa State University

Iowa State uses a campus-wide system to deliver early alert interventions centered on students’ existing relationships. Staff from several areas, including multicultural student affairs, academic success and scholarship programs, veteran’s services, and residence life collaborate to engage students’ utilization of campus resources. This coordinated approach uses data analytics and best practices grounded in student development to improve campus retention and persistence, particularly for underserved populations. This engaging presentation will provide an overview of a campus-wide structure and examples of how to apply this innovative approach on your campus.

Engaging with the Center for First-generation Student Success

Presenter(s): Deana Waintraub Stafford, Assistant Director, Center for First-generation Student Success, NASPA; Sarah E. Whitley, Senior Director, Center for First-generation Student Success, NASPA

The Center, an initiative of NASPA and The Suder Foundation, serves as the premier source of evidence-based practices, professional development, and knowledge creation for the higher education community to advance the success of first-generation students. Over the past year, the Center website (https://firstgen.naspa.org) has served as a valuable resource featuring over 400 scholarly and news articles, 50 blogs, numerous online learning events, as well as research and reports. During this session, the Center staff will highlight these extensive first-generation student focused resources, as well as opportunities to you to engage with the Center and share your institutional accomplishments, scholarly interests, and creative approaches for serving first-generation students.

Grove Scholars: Serving High-need Students for Four Years Beyond a Scholarship

Presenter(s): Gray Flora IV, Director, Grove Scholars and Senior Academic Mentor FASTrack, University of Mississippi

Grove Scholars is an emerging scholars program for students from low-income backgrounds that are pursuing a STEM degree or health related profession at the University of Mississippi. Employing a cohort model, an incentive structure, and a summer bridge program, Grove Scholars works to close the gap between access and equity for the students beginning prior to their first year and through graduation.

Leveraging Institutional Support to Enhance the Success of Ethnically Diverse Students

Presenter(s): Salome Nnoromele, Associate Dean of Student and Academic Affairs, Ohio University Southern; Martha Evans, Assistant Professor of Education, Ohio University Southern

Recruitment, retention and graduation of students are key performance indicators of success for any educational institution. For colleges and universities, it costs less to retain students, than to recruit them. For ethnically diverse students, the cost of non-completion is monumental for both the student and the community. Identifying and implementing strategies that successfully improve retention, completion and graduation rates for diverse students is a win-win for all.

Making Money Make Sense: Decreasing Financial Barriers for First-generation College Students

Presenter(s): Tia Dolet, Doctoral Student and Student Success Coach, University of North Carolina at Charlotte

The hidden costs of being a college student can be a major barrier to baccalaureate degree completion for first-generation college students, even if tuition is covered. The presenter of this interactive workshop will highlight the key relationship between practical financial literacy and sustained student success. Using her experience as a college success coach for first-generation students, the presenter will support practitioners in creating financial planning teaching tools, and share how to implement proactive advising techniques to help scholars develop a healthy relationship with money.

Optimizing Your Persistence & Retention Management Portfolio: Designing Performance Metrics & Effective Communication Plans

Presenter(s): Brian Hinote, Professor and Associate Vice Provost for Data Analytics and Student Success, Middle Tennessee State University; Richard Sluder, Vice Provost, Student Success, and Dean, University College, Middle Tennessee State University; Vincent Windrow, Associate Vice Provost for Student Success, Middle Tennessee State University

The presenters will explore the most significant elements of institutional student success portfolios, focusing on identifying/tracking performance metrics and designing effective communication plans. These topics are particularly important because data sharing, transparency, and accountability are integral elements of a highly developed student success culture. Further, properly tracking key performance indicators, and effectively delivering actionable data across university divisions, is critically important to direct attention, personnel, and resources to opportunity areas at pivotal points in enrollment and retention cycles.

Often, first-generation students are considered at-risk and numerous programs are created to support their transition to college. Does participation in such programs yield higher academic success? In an effort to address this question, the presenters engaged in a First-Generation Landscape Project. Specific emphasis was given to students who performed academically well but were not connected to programs. Participants will have the opportunity to learn the project’s purpose and design to consider if something similar would be beneficial at their institution.
Unlike most other survey platforms, which gather confidential data from users, Ansanon protects students’ identities and encourages honest answers through our truly anonymous surveys.

Why are truly anonymous surveys so important?

More of your students will participate in your survey if they’re guaranteed anonymity—especially for sensitive topics including:

> Risky Behavior
> Substance Abuse
> Sexual Misconduct
> On Campus Discrimination
> School Staff Evaluations
> Students on Recruitment Visits
